Soviet Warning on Berlin Airlift Ignored

Senate Goes To Work on Home Rule For District

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The Senate went to work yesterday to give Washington a new home rule government this year.

Four Senators joined in appealing for prompt passage of the District home rule bill after Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) won Senate backing by a voice vote for his move to bring the measure up for action. The voice vote made it the Senate's pending business, but voting was delayed until Senate sessions resume next Tuesday.

Calls to give Washington's voteless residents a voice in managing their own affairs were sounded by Senators Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.), Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.)

But while they spoke for the measure, an opposition move began with introduction by Senators James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) and Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) of an amendment to the home rule bill to ban any change in Washington's present racial segregation setup without public referendum and approval by Congress.

Backed by Russell

This plan was backed by Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.). At the same time Russell voiced his belief that the home rule bill is not to be regarded as a part of the Administration's civil rights program, but is a separate and local issue.

Russell said he had heard of no plan for attempting to block the home rule bill by long discussion. He said there would probably be considerable debate, and that he may speak against the bill.

Sponsors of the bill—including nine members of the 13-member Senate District Committee—have predicted that the bill would pass if the Senate found time to take it up.

That time was found yesterday.

Senator Taft, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, who took a direct hand in shaping some details of the home rule bill, declared it should be promptly approved by both the Senate and House.

He said that as one of the great cities of the Nation, Washington has all the qualifications for local self-government that other cities have.

Never Get Chance to Vote

He said it was "exceedingly anomalous" that in Washington American citizens are born and grew up with never a chance to participate in their local government.

Referring to congresisonal control over District affairs, Taft declared that the residents of Washington are governed by a body that has no time to take the proper interest in their welfare.

Senator Holland, who collaboraied as a Senate District Committee member in the last Congress in working out a home rule bill then, strongly indorsed the new measure. He protested that some 900,000 District residents are now denied the right given inhabitants of every other American city to

Many Leaving City to Spend 3-Day Holiday

Encouraged by forecasts of sunny, though cool weather through most of Memorial Day weekend, thousands of area workers, from the President down, left the city last evening as Government and most private offices closed for three days.

Air and highway travel appeared heaviest this year, transportation officials indicated, with airlines reporting capacity loads on many flights and a few adding extra sections to such points as New York.

The American Automobile Association, which warned of an expected 1000 or more highway casualties throughout the Nation this weekend, also reported that resorts at many Virginia beaches, as well as mountain areas in nearby States, were well booked in advance.

Extra help was required at the local AAA office to answer inquiries and make reservations for motorists, whose favorite goal seemed to be New York, the Virginia beaches, Williamsburg, nearby mountain resorts and the Skyline Drive, the travel department reported.

Both tubes of the Holland Tunnel are open now until 8 p. m., the AAA reported in answer to many inquiries. The tube that was damaged recently by an explosion is closed at night for repair work, and the other is used for two-way traffic after 8.

Bus line officials reported heavy travel in and out of the city last night. At Union Station, eight or nine extra sections were reported being added to New York trains in each direction, but railroad travel was off as compared to last year, officials reported.

The Old Bay Line "could have filled another boat" as its steamer District of Columbia left for Norfolk last night. It is booked solid for the northward trip Monday night, a spokesman said.

The Weather Bureau's forecast was for partly cloudy, cool weather today, following early morning showers. Fair, cool weather, with the maximum temperature in the 70s, was predicted for Sunday and Monday, with possible showers Monday evening.

British Court Frees Eisler; U. S. to Study New Approach

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Gerhart Eisler appeared to have made good in his attempt to keep out of the hands of United States authorities, it was privately admitted here last night.

The Justice Department stuck by its announcement that it will "exert every effort to secure the return of the fugitive."

But outside that department, several officials conceded that they know of no further course of action to alter the British magistrate's order which freed the stocky little Communist.

That decision is bound to serve as a propaganda weapon for the Iron Curtain countries in their attacks on the United States for what they have already described as the "political persecution" of Eisler, who was described while he was here as the Nation's "Number One Communist."

In New York, Mrs. Gerhart Eisler, 37, who was taken to Ellis Island after her husband fled, was overjoyed yesterday at his release —and appeared scheduled to join him overseas.

Immigration officials said that on Wednesday they will proceed against her with deportation proceedings, pending for more than a year, on grounds of overstaying her transit visa.

The Polish-born woman, who came here with Eisler in 1941 allegedly en route to Mexico—went into court yesterday and withdrew a writ for habeas corpus in which she charged she was being held as a hostage for her husband.

On Capitol Hill, the British court's determination that Eisler cannot be extradited under the British-United States Extradition Treaty, was greeted with mixed feelings ranging from "good riddance" to charges of British "ingratitude."

"That's getting him deported and at a low cost," said Senate Republican Leader Wherry (Neb.).

But Representative Brown (R., Ohio) commented: "What a great demonstration of appreciation by the British government of the sacrifices we have been making to aid the British people!"

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said the decision "strikes at the very foundation of justice," and he expressed belief that the court was "intimidated" by Communist pickets.

Representative Walter (D., Pa.)

London, May 27 (U.P.).—A British court freed Gerhart Eisler today, holding that he had been convicted of no offense for which he could be extradited to the United States.

". . . The United States . . . has failed to show that Mr. Eisler has been guilty of an extraditable crime," ruled Sir Laurence Dunne, chief metropolitan police magistrate.

Eisler was turned loose at once, after 13 days in jail since he was carried kicking and screaming from the Polish liner in which he escaped from the United States after jumping $23,500 bail.

Eisler went to the Home Office to apply for a visitor's permit in Britain, announcing that he hoped to leave for Germany via Poland in a few days.

At a press conference tonight, Eisler said he believed the United States would still try to catch him.

"I expect the American authorities will even attempt piracy on the high seas to get me," Eisler said. "But I am taking special measures."

An American Embassy spokesman said:

"We will record the decision of the court in the case and abide by it.

"We expect a statement from the United States State Department in a few days."

Eisler, who was called the real power in the American Communist Party during his eight years' stay in the United States, came up for hearing in Bow Street police court. Bow Street is Britain's

2% Sales Tax Takes Effect Here Aug. 1

(See Questions and Answers, Pg. 7)

President Truman yesterday signed into law the 17-million-dollar District revenue bill including the 2 per cent retail sales tax.

His action amounted to an order to put the sales tax into effect on August 1. Under the bill the sales levy is to take effect, along with increased liquor taxes, on the first day of the first month that follows by 60 days the signing of the act.

Presidential approval of the revenue bill also boosted chances for quick action on pay raises for city employes.

May Seek Action Tuesday

House District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) announced that he will explore the possibility of asking House action Tuesday on the bill to give a $330 annual pay raise to District policemen, firemen and school teachers.

The increases would be retroactive to last July, when Federal classified employes received a similar boost.

McMillan pointed out that he has the consent of House leaders to oring the pay bill to a House vote Tuesday if the measure can be handled quickly at that time. He said that if he finds there is to be lengthy opposition, or controversial amendments, the bill will be held over for action on the following Monday's District Day.

At the same time, Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) whose District subcommittee prepared the policemen, firemen, and teachers' pay bill, said he had received the draft of an amendment to extend the retroactive increase to District per diem employes. The amendment was drafted by Corporation Counsel Vernon West.

Raises in Separate Bills

Pay raises for classified District employes, carrying the same $330 retroactive provision, are being considered in separate bills pending in both houses.

District officials said some thought had been given to the chances for handling all the municipal pay raises in one bill. But members of the House Civil Service Committee said a single bill might run into a parliamentary snag, since raises for District classified and unclassified employes fall in the jurisdiction of separate committees.

Besides the sales tax features of the revenue bill, the new law boosts the real estate tax rate from $2 to $2.15 per $100, hikes local liquor taxes and license fees 50 per cent and beer levies 100 per cent, and changes the District income tax laws.

Representative Davis also announced that the District Subcommittee in charge of police legislation will begin a hearing at 10 a. m. Wednesday on increased pensions for widows and children of Washington police and firemen.

Committee aides invited prospective witnesses to submit requests for time to testify.

Final approval of the revenue law was praised by Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the Washington Board of Trade. He said the board was gratified and feels the sales tax is the "most appropriate source" of new revenue.

Day's Session Bogs Down

Vishinsky Presses Big Three For German Unity Proposals

Paris, May 27 (NYHT).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky repeatedly pressed his Western colleagues to make concrete proposals on the unity of Germany as today's session of the Council of Foreign Ministers bogged down in what a British spokesman later described as "the closest thing I can imagine to a four-power filibuster."

In response, French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman said "we also have our proposals." One Western source said it was likely a Western project would be forthcoming next week. Today, however, the Western diplomats concentrated on trying to find out more about what Vishinsky has on his mind.

The Soviet Foreign Minister seemed even more anxious to draw out the Westerners. Turning to Secretary of State Acheson, he asked insistently, "What does the United States propose in order to resolve this problem on our agenda? What concrete measures does it suggest? How does it see the solution? How will German unity be reestablished? Have the other delegations a plan?"

Getting no satisfactory answer to these queries, Vishinsky then asked the Western delegates if they wouldn't submit amendments to the Soviet proposal. He said he would even be willing to consider changes that would give the Germans more liberty than the original Russian plan outlined.

Acheson suggested the conference take up such economic questions as the reparations the Russians are taking in the form of current production in the Soviet zone.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin said nothing at all during the three-hour session beyond stating that he had no proposals to make.

Senate Asked To Give Pact Vote Priority

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A reshuffling of the Senate program to give the North Atlantic Treaty a No. 1 priority over other major Administration measures has been requested by the State Department.

Acting Secretary of State James E. Webb made a special trip to the Capitol yesterday to urge early billing of the treaty.

He talked to both Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) and Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.).

No decisions were reached but Lucas is understood to have left the matter of treaty priority pretty much up to Connally.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee hasn't completed action on the pact. A committee report is in preparation and will be considered by the committee next week. Connally said the earliest possible date his committee would be ready to proceed with the treaty in the Senate is a week from Monday.

There are Senate program complications, however. Leaders had tentatively agreed to give the Administration's Taft-Hartley Act repealer top billing when the State Department made its request, and the labor legislation may still lead the slate over both the Reciprocal Trade Extension Act and the North Atlantic Pact.

The reshuffling developed when

Captive Mines Union Shop Ruled Illegal

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ruled illegal the union shop contract which John L. Lewis forced the steel companies to sign last year for their coal mines.

The board held unanimously that the contract, signed after the United Mine Workers chief called a week-long strike in the so-called captive mines, is a clear violation of the Taft-Hartley law.

It ordered the UMW and the 18 steel companies involved to "cease giving effect" to the union shop clause which requires all persons hired to work in the captive mines to join the UMW.

The Taft-Hartley law forbids union shop contracts unless the employes covered by the agreement approve of it in advance in a secret ballot election conducted by the NLRB.

The 40,000 UMW members covered by the captive mine contract were not polled on the union shop question because the union is not eligible to call on the NLRB for its services. It is not eligible because Lewis and other UMW officers have refused on grounds of principle to sign the non-Communist affidavits required by the law.

Lewis and the steel companies were given 10 days in which to comply with the board order.

Lewis has the right to appeal the board's ruling to the U. S. Court of Appeals here. Or he can ignore the order, and it will be up to the NLRB to go into court and seek a temporary injunction forcing the union and steel companies to comply with the order pending a judicial review.

The contract expires on June 30. Lewis is expected to meet with the steel companies sometime after June 10 to negotiate for a new pact.

He met with Southern coal operators at Bluefield, W. Va., for contract talks this week, but negotiations were promptly snagged when Lewis challenged the right of the Southern Coal Producers Association to bargain for the operators. The meetings were recessed yesterday until next Thursday.

The NLRB action upheld a

Maneuvers Notice Asks Narrowing Of One Lane

Helmstedt Rail Line Paralyzed By Strike; Supply Situation Critical

Berlin, May 27 (AP).—The Russians suggested narrowing of one of the three airlift lanes to Berlin as a safety measure today, saying Soviet military maneuvers will start immediately and they will not be responsible for Allied planes entering the "danger areas."

United States and British authorities replied that their planes will continue to fly the corridors —20-mile-wide links between west Berlin and west Germany—without deviation.

Paralysis Grips Railway

The notification was given the Western allies as total paralysis gripped the railway from Helmstedt in this 11th day of a strike by anti-Communist west Berlin rail workers.

Berlin's "supply situation" appeared as critical as it was at the height of the recently lifted Soviet blockade.

The airlift has again become the main source of supply. It is steadily ferrying in about 8000 tons daily.

Willy Kreikemeyer, president of the Soviet-controlled Reichsbahn (railway system), made a new peace offer to rail strikers—60 per cent west Mark wages—in a Radio Berlin broadcast tonight. Strike leaders immediately called the offer worthless.

Demands Capitulation

West Berlin's lord mayor, Ernst Reuter, demanded that the Reichsbahn capitulate to the 12,000 strikers' demands for:

Full wages in west marks, recognition of the anti-Communist UGO (independent labor organization) as their legal bargaining agent, and rehiring of rail men dismissed for "political reasons."

Rail tracks in the Soviet zone were jammed with 34 stalled freight trains. Not a single train has moved since yesterday into west Berlin yards.

'Cosmic Ray' Box From Sky Empties Police Station

New York, May 27 (U.P.).—Police were called today when a tiny parachute with a deflated balloon and a small black box attached floated into a backyard in Brooklyn.

At precinct headquarters, Lieut. Frank Lisante read a small note attached to the box. It had the words, "Cosmic Rays."

"Everybody clear out!" he yelled. The station house was emptied of everyone except Lisante in seconds.

A closer study of the note revealed the apparatus was from Franklin Institute, Swarthmore, Pa. Institute officials said the apparatus measured the intensity of cosmic rays.

Girl Charges Marriage Denial By Bishop's Off-Limits Decree

Cambridge, Mass., May 27 (AP).—A young bride-to-be claimed tonight she was denied the sacrament of matrimony because of her association with an educational center recently placed "off limits" by the Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, Catholic Archbishop of Boston.

Miss Doris M. Coulombe, 22, of Brookline, recently resigned from Emmanuel College, a Catholic girls' school in Boston, with the contention the teachings there were "contrary to Catholic doctrine." She was scheduled to receive her degree next month.

St. Benedict's Center, a religious educational institution near Harvard College, was banned to Catholics after a doctrinal controversy involving the Archbishop and the Rev. Leonard Feeney, S. J., noted Jesuit author, poet and lecturer.

Miss Coulombe said the Rev. Thomas Dwyer, curate of the Immaculate Conception Church in Everett, declined to marry her to Thomas H. Sennott, 28, of Arlington, also associated with the center.

"He told us he can't marry us because of my association with St. Benedict's Center," Miss Coulombe said. "He said I would have to renounce the center and do penance. I couldn't do that."

She said Father Dwyer suggested she take up the case with the Catholic chancery. Both Father Dwyer and chancery authorities declined comment.

In his decree banning Catholics from the center, Archbishop Cushing warned:

"Any Catholics who frequent Saint Benedict's Center, or who in any way take part in or assist its activities, forfeit the right to receive the sacraments of penance and holy eucharist."

Miss Coulombe said Father Dwyer told her she was "not in a state of grace" and therefore not eligible to be married in the Catholic church.

Ford Strike Near Settlement, Federal Conciliator Reports

Detroit, May 27 (AP).—The 23-day-old Ford strike was reported near settlement tonight.

The optimistic report came from Arthur C. Viat, regional director of the Federal Mediation Service, as the company and the CIO United Auto Workers went into an unusual session at 9:30 p. m. (EDT).

Viat said the issue of arbitration —principal snag for days—had been cleared away.

This, he said, left only two remaining issues. [The United Press said only selection of the arbitrator, rehiring of 20 strikers fired by Ford, and length of relief periods remained to be agreed upon.—Editor's note.]

Asked if the negotiators were going to settle the strike tonight, Viat replied:

"We've got to settle it tonight."

UAW President Walter P. Reuther, emerging from the conference room this afternoon, said "things look better than at any time since the strike started."

John S. Bugas, Ford vice president in charge of industrial relations, would only say there was "some progress" at the afternoon meeting.

The optimism came despite earlier union rejection of the Ford Co.'s restated plan for arbitration of assembly line "speed-up" issues in the dispute.

If a settlement is reached tonight, some workers probably will be recalled after the Memorial Day weekend.

High CIO Officials' Homes Are Guarded

Detroit, Mich., May 27 (U.P.).—Police threw armed guards around the homes of high officials of the United Auto Workers Union (CIO) today, fearful of further attacks similar to the shooting of UAW official Victor Reuther.

Attorney General Tom Clark said at Washington that the FBI is cooperating with local authorities in their hunt for the would-be killer of Reuther, UAW education director and brother of UAW President Walter Reuther.

Clark promised a "full investigation" if any evidence of a Federal law violation can be shown in the shotgun attack Tuesday night.

Police Commissioner Harry S. Toy posted guards at the homes of six international UAW officials and State police promised protection for others who live outside of Detroit.

Under guard were Secretary-Treasurer Emil W. Mazey, Vice President Jack Livinston, and Regional Directors Michael Lacy, Norman Matthews, Joseph McCusker and Edward Cote and their families.

Meanwhile, the cheap double-barreled shotgun which the assailant left at the Reuther home was flown to Massachusetts for close examination by the makers, the J. Stevens Arms Co.

The gun is the major material clew. Police believe it is one of 2000 of that particular model built by the company and hope to narrow the search to distributors in the Detroit area.

Senate Asked To Speed Pact

the reciprocal trade bill, originally scheduled to come up Tuesday, was temporarily put aside due to the illness of Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.).

Leaders want George to lead the fight for extension of the trade agreements program, free of GOP "peril point" restrictions, even if the law has to lapse temporarily on its June 30 expiration date. They said little damage would result, since all trade agreements now in force would continue.

Until George is fully recovered they planned to proceed first with the Taft-Hartley repealer, which may take a minimum of three weeks to dispose of. Next they planned to call up the Trade Act and last of all the North Atlantic Treaty.

The State Department is said to feel this would leave the treaty trailing so badly that little time would be left for consideration of arms assistance legislation implementing the pact.

The department was further represented as feeling early consideration of the treaty would be helpful to Secretary of State Acheson in the current four-power Foreign Minister talks in Paris.

As a result of the request, the order of priority of the Senate three Administration "musts" remained completely up in the air last night.

Leaders said that whatever the decision, none of the three is likely to be reached next week.

The District home rule bill will be the unfinished business when the Senate returns Tuesday after a Memorial Day recess. The Myers basing point bill has been definiitely slated to follow that, and may take the remainder of the week.

Senate managers conceded that if the touch-and-go battle on Taft-Hartley repeal follows, the Senate will spend most of June debating it. But they are anxious to get started before the House begins its second round on the measure.

Unless the Administration is able to reverse the order, reciprocal trade extension will be debated in July after the existing law has expired, and the North Atlantic Treaty will wind up in caboose position just when Congress is clamoring for adjournment.

'Humble Pie'

Rail Union's Officers Take T-H Act Oath

Cleveland, May 27 (AP).—Remarking "we are eating humble pie," rail brotherhood chief A. F. Whitney today disclosed he and his officers had signed non-Communist affidavits required by the Taft-Hartley Act.

Long a foe of that law, Whitney had criticized its provisions that unions could not use the services of the National Labor Relations Board unless their officers had signed.

"We are forced to stultify ourselves by signing the affidavits in order to protect the interests of 16,000 members now working on bus lines," he said. "But we're still opposing the Taft-Hartley Act."

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen News, official publication of the union, carried the announcement in its current issue.

The brotherhood chief had signed in order to fight off raids on his union by others. The BRT claims a total membership of 215,000.

"They're attempting to take some of our contracts away from us," he said. "But this has nothing to do with our relations with the railroads. They are exempt from the Taft-Hartley Act and are covered by the Railway Labor Act.

Whitney cited as an example the case of the Carry Airport Service in New York City, operating about 350 coaches and limousines to haul passengers from airports to their destinations.

"Attempts are being made by Michael J. Quill's outfit (CIO Transport Workers Union) to raid a legitimate organization. We have had a good contract with this company for years, and now we have to sign affidavits to get on the NLRB ballot," he said.

ruling made by Trial Examiner William R. Ringer last January 19.

The UMW had "no comment" on the board order. It has had a union shop in the captive mines for nearly eight years.

The steel company negotiators complained when the last contract was signed last July 13 that they considered it a violation of the Taft-Hartley law to continue the arrangement without an NLRB poll. But they signed anyway after the shutdown, pending a ruling on legality of the clause.

The board took note of those facts in its ruling and directed Lewis and the UMW not to "instigate or encourage" miners to strike in the future to enforce a demand for a union shop. Under the Taft-Hartley law, it is illegal to strike for a union shop.

The captive coal mines, operated by various subsidiaries of the giant United States Steel Corp. and 10 other major steel producers, account for about 10 per cent of the Nation's annual soft coal tonnage.

The mines are in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Alabama, Ohio, and Utah.

Court Denies Overtime Pay To Atom Workers

Cincinnati, May 27 (AP).—The United States Court of Appeals, Sixth District, ruled today the atomic bomb is not an article of commerce and denied several workers overtime pay under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

R. C. Selby and others sued the J. A. Jones Construction Co. for overtime in the building of the atomic plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., during the last war.

The district court held the workers were not "engaged in commerce or in the production of goods in commerce," in deciding against them.

Harry Bridges Surrenders on Fraud Charge

San Francisco, May 27 (U.P.).—Harry Bridges, leader of CIO West Coast longshoremen, surrendered to a Federal judge on a perjury and fraud indictment today. He charged that the indictment stemmed from his criticism of the Truman Administration.

The Australian-born president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union appeared before Federal Judge Louis E. Goodman and immediately lost a plea to have his bail reduced from $5000.

A counterplea by F. Joseph Donohue, assistant to Attorney General Clark, to have the bail increased to $20,000 also was rejected by Judge Goodman.

Bridges and Henry Schmidt, in deputy command of the Hawaiian longshoremen's strike, and J. R. Robertson, first vice president of the ILWU, are charged with declaring falsely at Bridges' naturalization hearings that he was never a member of the Communist Party.

Schmidt and Robertson already have surrendered and posted the $5000 bail.

The Government's chief witness against the three union officials identified himself today. He is Mervyn Rathborne, former secretary-treasurer of the California CIO Council. Rathborne said he split with Bridges last year when "the Communists handed down orders to form a third political party in California."

Bridges was fingerprinted—for the first time in his life, he said.

He remarked in a press conference that "the Administration in Washington is so desperate in their approach, so determined to try and raise a smokescreen to hide things, that cases like this are happening."

He said the Administration "made a lot of promises last autumn and at that time had no intention of keeping them."

"The ILWU doesn't intend to lay back and say nothing."

Bridges also charged that "a lot of AFL and CIO leaders are back of this indictment."

Builders Get Set for Strike By Carpenters

The Washnigton area building industry took a gloomy view of conciliation efforts yesterday, and braced itself for a walkout of 5000 AFL carpenters next Wednesday.

The Master Builders Association, representing the bulk of union-employing contractors in this area, declared the strike appeared to be inevitable, after an all-day session of union and association officials with a Federal mediator came to naught.

The carpenters' strike would tie up virtually all commercial construction in and around Washington, including Federal and Distric projects, office buildings and elevator-type apartment houses. Home building, constructed chiefly with nonunion labor, would not be affected.

The work contract between the association and the carpenters ran out April 30. The carpenters have been working thus far under the old contract, but last Saturday night they voted to authorize the strike.

Commissioner James A. Holden, of the Federal Mediation Service, called the parties together yesterday in a move to break the stalemated negotiations. After an all-day session, Holden asked the union and association representatives to hold themselves on call for another meeting.

The carpenters, who get $2.40 an hour, are asking an increase of 10 cents. The builders in return offered to renew the old contract for a year.

Yesterday, both sides made concessions. The carpenters held out for 10 cents additional per hour, but offered to eliminate travel expenses for work in outlying districts, and to cut layoff notice from one hour to half an hour. The builders offered to renew the $2.40 contract for two years.

A walkout would throw some 15,000 other AFL mechanics and building laborers out of work.

Probers Quiz Slav an Hour, Get Nowhere

By the United Press

House spy hunters yesterday asked Tom Babin, former Yugoslav Embassy employe, whether there are any links between the Russian and Yugoslav Embassies here and the allegedly Communist-dominated American Slav Congress.

After an hour's questioning of Babin behind closed doors, members of the House Un-American Activities Committee said "nothing interesting" was learned.

Chairman Walter (D., Pa.) said Babin answered all questions "and we have no plans to call him back." He added that Fabin is still under subpena "in case we need him again."

A committee member said the session was not open to the public "because there was no point in doing so." He said Babin was asked about his knowledge of a number of people.

The committee is investigating charges that the American Slav Congress has been used for espionage in production centers such as Pittsburgh and Chicago. Committee officials said Babin never was an official of the congress, but played an "important policy role" in its operations.

CIO Furniture Workers' Chiefs Sign Affidavits

New York, May 27 (AP). — Top officers of the CIO International Furniture Workers today reluctantly decided to sign Taft-Hartley law non-Communist affidavits "to preserve our organization."

President Morris Pizer said the furniture workers' union has lost 4000 members as a result of raids by labor organizations he did not identify.

Miss Coplon Claims Plot Against Her

By The Associated Press

Judith Coplon swore at her espionage trial yesterday that she is innocent of wrongdoing, and charged that someone has hatched a "plot" to destroy her.

In a 45-page affidavit, Miss Coplon said "the only crime I can be said to be guilty of is that I knew a Russian."

She asked the court to bar the Government from using papers found in her purse as evidence.

Chief Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., has said the papers are the backbone of the Government's case. FBI agents have testified they seized the papers when Miss Coplon and her alleged Russian sweetheart, Valentine A. Gubitchev, 32, were arrested in New York last March 4.

Miss Coplon, 28, a former Justice Department analyst, told the court in her sworn statement:

"The court has said to my attorney in open court, after the FBI agents testified, that they found no record of any kind to connect me with any Communist activities or any subversive activities.

"Who is behind this apparent plot to destroy me?"

"I have been vilified, my name has been spat upon, my father has died because of the shock, my mother is ill, and practically all of my friends has deserted. And I still do not know the why and wherefore of this."

Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves did not indicate when he would hear arguments on the motion to suppress the papers.

Defense Counsel Archibald Palmer has contended from the outset of the month-old trial that Miss Coplon's purse and its contents were illegally seized because FBI agents admittedly had no warwant when they arrester her.

The Government started to introduce the papers early in the trail but withdrew them when Palmer's demand that the papers be returned to Miss Coplon, but withheld a final decision about their use as evidence.

The Government contends that among the papers was a handwritten memorandum in which Miss Coplon allegedly described her failure to filch a "top secret FBI report." The purse also contained, the Government says, a "decoy" document planted where Miss Coplon would find it in her Justice Department office.

Miss Coplon said in her affidavit that she had never been questioned about her meetings with Gubitchev before they were arrested together.

She said the Russian "at all times appeared to be a gentleman and acted as such and told me he was an engineer working for the United Nations, a non-political group."

Miss Coplon faces a second trial in New York later, with Gubitchev as co-defendant, on espionage conspiracy charges.

Sacks Denied Change Of Loyalty Hearing

Berlin, May 27 (AP).—A Military Government grievance committee refused today to transfer to Washington a "loyalty" hearing for an American employe.

The group rejected the request of Alexander Sacks of New York, who contended he could not obtain a "fair" judgment in Germany because he had attacked his superiors' actions on decartelization.

The committee will open the hearing next Tuesday.

Unification Bill Slowed in House

The Senate-approved bill to tighten unification of the armed forces is headed for a pigeonhole in the House, it was revealed yesterday.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said his House Armed Services Committee, which has jurisdiction over the measure, may not get around to acting on it this year. He explained that the committee's schedule already is crowded.

Other sources said key members of the committee are opposed to the bill on the ground that it would concentrate "dangerous" power in the hands of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

Vinson himself is reported to feel that the Defense Secretary already has plenty of authority to make unification work, if he will use it effectively. He is understood to favor giving Johnson a "full opportunity to improve unification under the present law.

The Senate passed the bill Thursday night. The Senate Armed Services Committee estimated it would permit Johnson to save up to $1,500,000,000 a year on the 15-billion-dollar defense budget.

In addition to giving the Secretary more concrete powers over the Army, Navy and Air Force, the bill would set up a civilian comptroller to take charge of the purse strings of all the armed forces and establish a modern accounting system.

Even if the House Committee pigeonholes the bill for the rest of this year, it could still be acted upon in the House next year without having to go back through the Senate.

For Meditation

U. N. to Open With Period Of Silence

Lake Success, May 27 (AP).—Bowing to hundreds of pleas, Trygve Lie proposed today the United Nations Assembly open sessions with a 1-minute period of silence for prayer, meditation or remembrance.

The U. N. Secretary General also said architects working on the new U. N. headquarters in Manhattan are drawing plans for a plain, windowless cylindrical house to be used as a prayer or meditation room.

Both these ideas must be approved by the Assembly.

Lie pointed out the U. N. takes in every religion, creed and section in the world and a public or spoken prayer could not be introduced which would satisfy all tenets and give offense to none.

Senate Votes Protection for Agents of CIA

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday passed without opposition a closely guarded bill to strengthen the Central Intelligence Agency and protect its agents abroad.

In the brief debate which proceeded passage of the measure, few details of its contents were revealed. No public hearings had been held by the Armed Services Committee which recommended its adoption.

A similar bill was passed by the House May 7, also after limited debate. Differences between the two measures will have to be compromised in conference before a final draft goes to President Truman.

Senators Langer (R., N. Dak) and Johnson (D., Colo.) raised objections to the bill during debate but did not vote against its passage. Both Senators expressed fear that a "military Gestapo" might be set up in the United States but withdrew their objections when Senator Tydings (D., Md.) explained the CIA would be given no powers here. All the agency's operations, he said, are conducted abroad.

Had proper attention been given to intelligence before World War II, Tydings told the Senate, there might have been no disaster at Pearl Harbor.

"We were babes in the woods in this respect," he declared.

Most important among the provisions of the measure is one that would admit a maximum of 100 aliens and their families into the United States annually for permanent residence without regard to immigration quotas. In this category would be foreigners who had served as agents and informers for the United States and were in danger of apprehension and possible death if not removed from their homelands.

Possible misbehavior after arrival would be guarded against by providing that these aliens could be deported for cause.

Langer attacked this provision on the grounds that "too many deposed royal families already have crossed over here." He withdrew his objection after Tydings agreed to change the language in conformity with suggestions by Langer.

Other sections would permit "expenditure of funds for confidential purposes, to be accounted for solely by certification of the director." Provision was made for the CIA to exchange gold and foreign currencies overseas and to pay special allowances and living costs to employes. Indicative of the hazards in the agency's work was a provision for paying costs of returning bodies of employes and their families to this country for burial.

Doctors to Join Malmedy Case

By the United Press

A team of doctors and dentists will go to Germany next month to look into charges that Nazi defendants in the Malmedy massacre case were brutally beaten, Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.) announced yesterday.

Baldwin, chairman of a Senate Armed Services subcommittee investigating the charges, said he has asked Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing to assign Federal medical men for the journey.

Tentative plans call for the group to leave June 19 and return June 26. Baldwin and Senators Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) and Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), the other subcommittee members, probably will make the trip. Col. Joseph Chambers, committee staff member, will go along.

The doctors and dentists will examine the Nazi defendants for evidence that United States Army agents destroyed their reproductive organs with kicks and broke their jaws during interrogation. Charges to this effect have been made by American defense lawyers.

Seventy-three Germans were convicted of machine-gunning to death 80 American war prisoners in a cow pasture near Malmedy, Belgium, during the Battle of the Bulge in 1944. Forty-three of the Germans were originally sentenced to death by a United States war crimes court. Since then all but six death sentences have been commuted. Execution of the six is being held up pending results of the Senate investigation.

Plan to Bring Natural Gas To Oak Ridge Is Criticized

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee yesterday unanimously condemned an AEC contract to build a 10-million-dollar natural gas pipeline through Tennessee coalfields to the Oak Ridge atomic energy plant.

Still under consideration by the full committee is a subcommittee recommendation that legislation be introduced requiring specific authorization from Congress before the Atomic Energy Commission can embark upon a major project.

The report was made public as the committee debated procedures for a full-dress inquiry into Chairman David E. Lilienthal's stewardship of the Nation's atomic energy program.

Decision Delayed

Decision on the direction of the inquiry was put over for a closed session of the committee Tuesday in order to give Senator Bourke B. Hikenlooper (R., Iowa) an opportunity to prepare a bill of particulars against Lilienthal.

Hickenlooper has demanded that Lilienthal be removed as head of the Atomic Energy Commission for "incredible mismanagement and maladministration." President Truman has defended Lilienthal with the statement that he has "entire confidence" in the AEC chairman.

Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Joint Committee told reporters yesterday that the subcommittee recommendation requiring congressional authorization for major AEC projects will be adopted in some form.

"Measures are being considered," he said, "which undoubtedly will take the form of legislation to require preapproval by Congress of major AEC spending projects."

Committee debate over the recommendation has centered about what spending limit should be set before a congressional okay is required.

Coal Stockpiling Asked

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Carl T. Durham (D., N. C.), came to the following conclusions which the full committee adopted:

1. Adequate coal stockpiling appears to be feasible at Oak Ridge to insure continuous power-plant operation.

2. Reliance on fuel resources outside the local area does not appear compatible with the original selection of the Oak Ridge site or in the best interests of the common defense and security.

3. The commission's action has been taken without consulation with the National Security Resources Board.

4. Substantial improvement in the national fuel picture in the past 18 months has not been reflected in the Commission's action.

The report stated that on certification by the commission that the pipeline was "necessary for the common defense and security of the Nation," the Federal Power Commission approved the project.

A contract with the East Tennessee Natural Gas Co., by which the commission would bear the ultimate financing, was entered into June 21, 1948, at a total estimated cost of $9,329,900, the report said.

The commission has pledged an initial amount of $4,400,000 for natural gas payments. The contract will expire on June 30, 1952, provided it has not been terminated or extended prior to that date.

If Congress blocks the AEC from going ahead with the contract, McMahon said, it will be the commission's responsibility to get out of the agreement.

The subcommittee began looking into the gas pipeline last month before the current controversy over Lilienthal began. Members of the subcommittee beside Durham are Representatives Melvin Price (D., Ill.), W. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.) and James Van Zandt (R., Pa.).

News of the report brought prompt comment from Ward Thompson, president of the East Tennessee Natural Gas Co.

"It does not affect the contracts between the AEC and the East Tennessee Natural Gas Co. in the least.

"It is incredible to believe that Congress would act to have the AEC break a firm contract," he told the Associated Press. He added that "the commission came to us and asked us to build the line; we didn't seek to sell them."

He pointed out to The Washington Post that the company already had its certificate from the Federal Power Commission to serve AEC. "Not only that," he said, "but we have received our steel through the Department of Agriculture, through allocation.

He added that "it makes us wonder whether the railroad and coal interests had or had not a hand in bringing this report about."

The Joint Committee yesterday discussed questions of security, and distribution of fellowships by the commission.

Part of the recent criticism of the commission was caused by the disclosure that the commission had given a fellowship to at least one admitted Communist.

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) is preparing to write into law a ban on such fellowship distribution.

McMahon told reporters yesterday he hoped to be able to bring the judgment of his committee on the matter to the attention of the Appropriations group before the purseholders act on the AEC appropriation.

Troops Digging In For Canton Defense

One Disappears

North Korea Seizes Priests And Bishop

Seoul, May 27 (AP). — Bishop Boniface Sauer, 74, of the North Korean Wonsang Diocese, and numerous priests have been arrested by Communist officials of the north, the Catholic mission here was informed today.

Bishop Francis Hong, 46, of Pyongyang, capital of northern Korea, has disappeared, the mission was advised.

The Rev. Laurent E. Youn, chancellor of the mission, said the events indicated the Communist peoples government in the north had reversed a hands-off policy enforced by Soviet occupation forces before their withdrawal last December.

Seven Filipinos Killed In Ambush of Cars

Manila, May 27 (AP).—Seven Filipinos were killed last night in an ambush near the United States Clark Air Base.

One American airman and three other persons were wounded in the holdup of five automobiles near the airfield, 50 miles northwest of Manila.

Canton, May 27 (U.P.).—Nationalist troops began digging trenches in the outskirts of Canton today. At least 5000 persons a day were fleeing the city.

Nationalist spirits were at their lowest ebb. A five-man delegation flew to Chiang Kai-shek's secret hideout to try to persuade him to resume his leadership of China.

Defensive preparations extended as far as the border of northern Kwangtung Province, now directly threatened with Communist attacks from the north.

One division of newly trained reinforcements arrived at the port of Swatow from Formosa, where 400,000 Chinese troops are undergoing training by Gen. Sun Li-jen, a graduate of Virginia Military Institute.

Shanghai Life Returns Near Normal Under Reds

Shanghai, May 27 (AP).—Traffic was snarled again on Shanghai streets today. Hawkers crowded the sidewalks. Money changers invitingly clinked their silver dollars.

Asia's largest city was thus back to near normality as the fighting phase of the Communist take-over ended.

American Economic Cooperation officials announced they had canceled further food shipments to Shanghai and had advised oil shippers that the city was Communist-occupied.

ECA officials estimated Shanghai still had about a week's supply of ECA rice and enough oil to run its power plants 10 days.

British Court Frees Eisler, Citing Extradition Treaty

chief extradition tribunal and today's decision was final.

Sir Valentine Holmes, one of the country's foremost lawyers, headed counsel for the American Embassy which was the applicant for extradition. Denis N. Pritt, left-wing Labor member of Parliament, headed Eisler's legal staff.

It was made clear from the start that Magistrate Dunne doubted Eisler had committed an extraditable offense. He was sentenced to 1 to 3 years' imprisonment at Washington in 1948 for falsely declaring that he was not a Communist, when he applied for a permit to return to Germany via Mexico in 1945.

The key point was Dunne's ruling that, under British law, perjury constitutes "a false statement made in judicial proceedings or which, if made outside the courtroom, must be made for the purpose of judicial proceedings."

Addressing himself to Holmes, Dunne said:

"Can you say he (Eisler) has been convicted of perjury? I should have thought the answer was obviously 'No.'

"Suppose he had been indicted for a false statement on oath? But he was not indicted for that. He was indicted for making a false statement. There was no mention of oath.

"In these circumstances the United States, as the requisitioning power, has failed to show that Mr. Eisler has been guilty of an extraditable crime and this application fails."

At the start of the hearing, Embassy Attorney Holmes found himself in difficulties on technicalities. He admitted that Eisler was not charged with perjury "in those words" in the United States. He said he hoped to prove the offense of which Eisler was convicted "would support a charge of perjury."

After defining the charge of perjury in British law, Dunne said:

"No judicial proceeding was contemplated when Mr. Eisler made his statement to obtain a departure permit from the United States."

Eisler was convicted simply of making a false statement in applying for permission to leave the United States.

Defense Counsel Pritt demanded that the United States be made to pay the costs of the trial and to compensate Eisler for delaying his journey. The court said Eisler suffered "inconvenience and some amount of loss," but did not make a ruling.

"That question should be and probably will be considered by those responsible to see whether or not some compensation should be allowed him," Judge Dunne said.

"One must recognize the fact that although Mr. Eisler is not a fugitive criminal in the sense of the extradition act, he is a convicted person who is a fugitive."

Fifty-two-year-old Eisler, no stranger to trouble, sat impassive in the iron-grilled prisoners' dock. He did not even turn his head when he realized he was free.

Eisler stowed away on the Polish liner Batory at New York with a collapsible toothbrush as his baggage and Gdynia, Poland, as his intermediate goal. He was hauled from the ship off Southampton May 14 by four British policemen by American request. He said physical force was used and he was "treated scandously."

"I resisted until the last moment," he said.

He had no complaint, however, about his treatment in jail.

Eisler smiled broadly as he left the court. About 200 supporters cheered. Some yelled "Good old Eisler." He tried to make a statement, but a police constable pushed him and said "Move along."

Eisler was cautious in talking with reporters of his immediate plans. He said he didn't know where he would sleep tonight and wouldn't tell if he knew.

"I don't want to give the Americans a chance for any monkey business," he said. "I am tremendously glad the American reactionaries have been defeated. I hope they will get more and bigger defeats. The fair-mindedness of the average American will react favorably to my victory."

Eisler said he would go to Germany, but "I cannot go through the American zone."

"I hope nobody is going to force me to go through it, either by force or accident," he said. "In view of the magistrate's decision, I am sure that the American reactionaries will do everything possible to get me into the American zone. I don't trust American reactionaries for a half-penny worth."

Eisler caught a taxicab when he got clear of the crowd. After lunch he went to the Home Office and said he would like permission to remain in Britain a few days. He was given an application form. For the present, the Home Office said, he is free to move about without police restrictions.

It is understood that Eisler will go to Leipzig, in the Soviet zone of Germany.

'Hic' Costs Juror $15

Dublin, May 27 (U.P.).—A prospective juror was fined $15 in Circuit Court yesterday because he hiccuped while being sworn in.

He confessed to having a "few jars" on the way to court.

The judge sent him home to sleep it off.

Baltimore, May 27 (AP).—Dr. Ralph P. Truitt announced today that he had resigned from positions as professor of psychiatry at the University of Maryland School of Medicine and executive secretary of the Mental Hygiene Society of Maryland.

The resignations take effect June 1. Dr. Truitt said he will devote his time to private practice. He has been associated with the two institutions for 21 years.

U. S. Authorities Admit Defeat As British Court Frees Eisler said a Judiciary Subcommittee which he heads may approve legislation requiring deportable aliens to be kept in jail, and he said, "From my general knowledge of the law, I don't see how any other decision could have been reached. Under the law the British had to release him."

"It's good riddance," declared Senator McMahon (D., Conn.).

A State Department spokesman said, "It appears that no appeal is possible (from the British decision). However, we are checking all possibilities."

Attorney General Clark said the court's action, as reported in the press, "appears to be based on the most narrow technical grounds."

The Justice Department refused to indicate what new steps it may be contemplating. That might conceivably concern action against the Polish line which operates the ship Batory, aboard which the German-born Eisler stowed away on May 6, skipping his $23,000 bail.

The bail includes $10,000 on the matter at issue in the British court—conviction for making false statements on an exit visa; $10,000 bond posted on conviction for contempt of Congress, and $3500 in bond involving deportation proceedings.

The Civil Rights Congress, which posted the $23,000 bail, will launch a campaign for contributions to make up the forfeited bail, William L. Patterson, executive secretary, said yesterday, adding that "No one who advanced money to the bail fund has suffered any loss."

In seeking Eisler's extradition from Britain under the Anglo-American Extradition Treaty of 1931, the United States hoped the court would give a "generic" rather than a "technical" interpretation of perjury, a legal official said yesterday.

Perjury is one of 27 offenses which are listed in the treaty, and this official said: "It was our thought that perjury would cover any false swearing that had elements of perjury."

The specific crime of perjury must involve false statements made "in a judicial proceeding," under British law, which technically would not apply to Eisler's statements on an exit application, he said.

But he noted that the British Perjury Act of 1911, entitled, "an act to consolidate and simplify the law relating to perjury and kindred offenses," lists perjury, false statements and similar offenses without differentiating between indictment or prosecution for the various offenses.

He pointed out, however, that the treaty leaves it to the country involved to determine if there is sufficient evidence under its laws to authorize extradition.

Ordinarily, he said, these treaties are interpreted "liberally" by participating nations.

New Witness Testifies to Knife Threat

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 27 (AP).—A surprise witness in the murder trial of Dr. Robert C. Rutledge, jr., testified today that the late Byron C. Hattman flashed a knife and made a death threat in her presence last August.

The witness was Mrs. Agnes Schamberg, 65-year-old janitress in a St. Louis plant.

District Judge J. E. Heiserman interrupted the final pleas to the jury after the defense asked that testimony be reopened so Mrs. Schamberg could testify.

Dr. Rutledge, 28-year-old St. Louis children's specialist, is charged with stabbing Hattman to death here last December 14 during a fight over the young engineer's alleged seduction of the doctor's blond wife Sidney, 23.

Mrs. Schamberg said the man whom she recognized from a newspaper picture only last evening as being Hattman came into the plant where she worked last August 15.

"He said, 'I'm Barney from the Emerson plant' and asked to use the phone," she testified.

(Associates of Hattman at the Emercon Electric Co. plant in St. Louis where both he and Mrs. Rutledge were employes testified they knew him as "Barney.")

Mrs. Schamberg said a "noisy fan" prevented her overhearing the conversation, if any.

"But I heard the telephone smash down on its stand," she testified. "Then I asked him jokingly if some fellow was stealing his girl.

"He said 'yes' and he showed me a knife. He said 'I could plunge this through his back.'"

Mrs. Schamberg said the knife had a spring on it "and the blade flew open." She said it was a long knife with a sharp point.

Mrs. Schamberg said she looked up newspaper files last night and identified the man from a picture as being Hattman. She said a priest told her to go to a lawyer and tell her story. Then, she continued, she got in touch with the Rutledge defense counsel.

Her testimony supported the defense contention that Hattman was stabbed accidentally as the two men grappled after the engineer had struck Dr. Rutledge and drawn a knife.

It was expected to be at least noon Saturday before the jury could begin deliberations.

D. C. Lawyer Suspended for Malpractice

Attorney Woodrow E. Faulkner was ordered suspended from law practice for one year by a District Court tribunal yesterday because of "malpractice and professional misconduct."

This was disclosed in an informal memorandum opinion signed by the tribunal composed of Judges F. Dickinson Letts, James W. Morris and Henry A. Schweinhaut.

The suspension was on one count of a two-count charge brought against Faulkner by the Committee on Admissions and Grievances of District Court.

This count involved alleged misappropriation of $500 which had been posted as bond money in a maintenance suit. The second count charged that the lawyer had accepted a $300 fee to file a motion for a new trial for a client, but never filed the motion.

The tribunal's memorandum said the charges in the first count were "fully established" and therefore the court found Faulkner guilty of "malpractice, professional misconduct and conduct prejudicial to the legal profession and to the administration of justice."

The three-judge tribunal concluded that the charge in the second count had also been proved. Faulkner was censured on that count.

Faulkner, a member of the District bar since May, 1941, has offices at 1311 G st. nw.

Pantie Burglar Brings Blush To Policemen

It looked like bargain day in the lingerie departmentof the Bethesda police station yesterday as more than a dozen women picked over some 2000 undergarments seeking those which had been stolen from them.

The blushing "salesman" of all this silk and satin loot was Montgomery County Detective Sergt. John P. Leahy, who placed the police force in the scanties business by arresting Walter E. Garrett, 41, of 499 Cullinane ct. sw.

Garrett was arrested and charged with theft of the underthings after Sergeant Leahy and another detective approached him in the 6400 block of Fairfax rd., Bethesda, and saw a skirt drop to the ground through his trouser leg, Leahy reported. They had gone there whe na citizen reported a suspicious man was loitering near an apartment house.

As police had received numerous complaints of brassieres, panties, scanties and other feminine garments being missing from laundry rooms of apartment houses in that area over the past year, Garrett's home was searched.

Police found the undergarments stuffed into two steamer trunks, four suitcases and a bushel basket, they said. Garrett, released under $1000 bond, is scheduled for trial at 9:30 a. m. on June 13 in Bethesda Police Court.

Meanwhile, the line forms on the right at the police station as the underthings are claimed.

Gentlemen And Scullers

The honorable old sport of rowing lately has been undergoing a revival on the broad waters of the upper Potomac. Almost any day racing crews may be observed from Key Bridge, propelling their flimsy shells with the measured strokes of multiple oars. Indeed, some of the local addicts have been so persuasive that they have converted students from two suburban high schools. Some two dozen members of the team from George Washington High School in Alexandria practice at the Old Dominion Boat Club there, while 30 others from Arlington's Washington and Lee High School are coached at the Potomac Boat Club in Washington. The lads from Arlington have become so proficient that they are competing today in the National Interscholastic Rowing Championship finals at Detroit.

Around the turn of the century, rowing was a popular pastime in Washington, and Georgetown University teams made the Potomac resemble stretches of the Hudson near Poughkeepsie. We learn that local racing enthusiasts who participated actively in their college days include such men as Secretary of State Dean Acheson and the Maritime Commission chairman, Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming. As a matter of fact, the usually placid Potomac is one of the best rivers in the country for racing, and we think it is a pity that more schools and colleges have not yet joined in the revival.

Diplomatic Field

Streamlining in the State Department took a leap forward in the current crop of new appointments. The choices by and large are excellent. They reflect credit on both President and Secretary of State in making efficiency the criterion of key posts in the State Department. At Mr. Acheson's elbow, in the role of counselor, will be Mr. George Kennan, a scholar and a gentleman of attainments as wide as they are deep. As legal adviser the brilliant Mr. Adrian Fisher is bound to be another tower of strength for Secretary Acheson. Undersecretary Webb is likewise fortified in the responsibility of organization. There are to be two deputies: John E. Peurifoy and Dean Rusk, hitherto Assistant Secretaries. No promotion is likely to cause more satisfaction to members of Congress than Mr. Peurifoy's. Mr. Peurifoy, who used to be liaison official with Congress, is the new deputy Undersecretary for Administration, and for this work he is well equipped.

All regions in the world will now have assistant secretaries in charge of relations thereto. The appointments demonstrate a welcome approach to more comprehensive thinking than has been the case heretofore. Mr. George C. McGhee, who will handle Near Eastern and African affairs, Mr. Edward Miller, whose field is Latin America, and Mr. George W. Perkins, with Europe as his assignment, are outside the career service. Mr. McGhee is rewarded for the fine job he has done as coordinator of aid to Greece and Turkey. He will bring vigor and common sense to the conduct of relations with a region where they have hitherto been lacking. Mr. Miller's wartime service in the State Department is still remembered with appreciation by newspapermen, particularly during the San Francisco Conference. He is open and above board, with a fealty to American ideals that is bound to be expressed toward Latin America in terms of principle and neighborliness. Mr. Perkins is little known in Washington though it is understood he has done well with the ECA in Paris.

Two of the five new Assistant Secretaries are foreign service officers. They are Mr. W. Walton Butterworth for the Far East and Mr. John D. Hickerson for the United Nations. Both are diplomats of standing and experience. Mr. Butterworth, as division chief for the Far East, has been under fire from the China interventionists in Congress. They think of Mr. Butterworth as one of the barriers against their designs. To be sure, he has hitherto been an advocate of watchful waiting in China. In our opinion, this was till now the proper attitude to adopt toward the Chinese convulsion, and the Government is at diplomatic disadvantage today because Congress last year overruled it and invested arms and money in a Chiang Kai-shek victory.

Secretary Acheson is gathering around himself a team of first-class aides for working out and carrying out a forwardlooking and activist foreign policy in keeping with American responsibilities.

The Veto Again

Mr. Vishinsky has been trying to reestablish the "rule of unanimity," or, in shorter and uglier language, the veto, as the arbiter of whatever four-power authority may reemerge in Germany. From the Soviet standpoint he is right; the veto in day-to-day administration of Germany has served Soviet purposes admirably. For the same reason Mr. Acheson was right to reject any idea of reviving the veto in its old form. The veto rule served only to obstruct and paralyze the functioning of any kind of government, both in Berlin and in Germany as a whole. It would be better not to have quadripartite rule at all, even in a few severely limited fields, than to have every decision require the unanimous vote of all four occupying powers.

Fortunately there is an alternative under which four-power supervision of sorts would be possible and workable. This is the ingenious "veto-in-reverse" which has worked tolerably in Austria, with Soviet consent, for almost three years. Under this system the Austrian central government is free to make agreements with other governments without the unanimous approval of the occupying powers. All it has to do is to inform the four-power control authority of each proposed action and to allow a period of grace before the action becomes effective. Only in the case of Austrian agreements with former enemy countries, namely, with Germany, Japan or the former Axis satellites, is unanimous four-power consent needed. The same sensible conditions apply in the case of domestic Austrian legislation. On most questions the Austrian Parliament is perfectly free to legislate; only in the case of constitutional changes must it get the unanimous approval of the four occupying powers.

Austria thus offers a pattern for four-power authority in Germany, assuming that any kind of agreement emerges from the dreary discussions in Paris. There are signs that the Western governments have been paying belated attention to the precedents set in Vienna by Gen. Mark Clark, Lieut. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes and the other Allied authorities there. Some of what might be called the Vienna spirit crept into the recent agreement setting up a high commission of the three Western powers in the new German republic. The high commissioners must be unanimous in approving any amendment to the new federal constitution; the United States will also have a virtual veto power over any German legislation that would add to the burden of American costs. But on all other matters a majority vote of the high commissioners will decide, subject only to each commissioner's right to appeal to his home government and to delay action without paralyzing it. The old rule of unanimity was also abolished within Berlin when the Russians walked out of the four-power Kommandatura and when the Western allies set up a three-power goverhing authority of their own. Important as it is to get a limited agreement with the Russians, important as it is to reduce the tensions that tear Europe apart, the Western negotiators at Paris would be fools if they restored four-power rule on the old basis.

Behind The B-36

From all standpoints the determination of the House Armed Services Committee to investigate the Air Force purchase of B-36 bombers is in the public interest. The confusion over the B-36 is now so hopeless that only the fullest inquiry, coupled with exhaustive tests, can arrive at the truth. If, as has been intimated, there have been political angles to the awarding of large contracts to Consolidated Vultee Aircraft, the reasons for those contracts ought to be examined. If the contracts with Convair are completely aboveboard, the best way to establish this is by airing all the circumstances surrounding the orders.

Particularly relevant will be a probe of why the Air Force suddenly became converted to the B-36. Until a year or so ago, the B-36 seemingly was in disfavor as too big and too slow. Recently, however, this Convair plane has been boosted as an intercontinental bomber. The innuendo has been spread that the recent expansion of orders for the B-36 is related to Secretary of Defense Johnson's former position as a director of Consolidated Vultee. Critics also point to Air Secretary Symington's reported friendship with financier Floyd Odlum, who is the controlling force in Consolidated and a heavy Democratic campaign contributor. It also has been alleged that Convair, which lost money last year, recently has been lording it over other manufacturers and telling them to get in line for subcontracts. These are serious allegations which deserve nonpolitical study.

The controversy over the B-36 cannot be divorced, of course, from Navy sour grapes over Mr. Johnson's cancellation of the supercarrier. Examination of plane contract statistics as reported by the Aircraft Industries Association on the surface does not bear out the contention that Convair has the lion's share of the orders. Consolidated has built or is building 170 B-36s; but Boeing, which is building 130 B-50s and 15 B-47s, has a larger backlog of orders. If Consolidated is in a position of dominance, this has come about recently and probably is predicated on anticipated orders.

It is quite possible, even likely, that the choice of the B-36 as a major instrument of strategy represents the honest conviction of the Air Force that it is the best plane available. The pertinent questions beyond the contracts themselves are whether the B-36 actually can do practically what is claimed for it in theory, whether there was undue waste in the cancellation of other orders, and whether the Air Force is in danger of loading itself up with too many planes that could become obsolete. It is for this reason that the test of the ability of Navy jet fighters to intercept the B-36 is a good idea—and we hope the cards will not be stacked in this case as the admirals contrived to stack them against Gen. "Billy" Mitchell in the plane-battleship exhibition of the early 1920s. One certain benefit from such a test will be to acquaint leaders of the Air Force and Navy with the capabilities of each other's planes—and the logical outgrowth of such knowledge is less emphasis on any one particular plane or weapon as decisive.

Standpat Attitude

We were in error in assuming that President Truman had bowed to the inevitable by approving the plan of Administration leaders to adjourn about July 31, deferring action on taxation, civil rights and social legislation until the next session. Since the announcement of adjournment plans were made by Senator Lucas, the majority leader, following a White House conference, it was reasonable, though as events have proved incorrect, to jump to the conclusion that the President had abandoned his futile attempt to put through his extensive and highly controversial legislative program at the present session. However, it turns out that he wants Congress to stay in session as long as necessary to complete action on this program, including the four-billion-dollar tax increase bill, originally recommended as an anti-inflationary measure.

By this time the President cannot fail to realize that the business recession, now gaining momentum, makes it absurd to urge new taxation as a means of curbing inflation. On five different occasions the Federal Reserve Board has taken action to liberalize credit, a clear indication that it is concerned to arrest a deflationary trend that the Administration's tax program would unquestionably accelerate. In view of the changed business outlook, it is hard to understand why the President clings so obstinately to this item in his legislative agenda. His attitude may be influenced by his equally stubborn resistance to proposals for cutting Government costs and avoiding the budget deficits that are in prospect, unless expenditures are reduced or new taxes voted. But in the absence of any explanations, it is fair to assume that the President is simply standing pat on his original proposals because he considers retreat a sign of weakness.

To our way of thinking this attitude is a sign of weakness rather than strength. The able leader is the man who aims at attainable goals and does not alienate legislative supporters on whose cooperation he has to rely by demanding the impossible. That is precisely what the President is attempting to do by insisting that a balky Congress remain in session until it has acted on a program that, quite apart from its merits, is much too comprehensive and complicated to be disposed of within the next few weeks or months. That sort of deliberately blind driving leads nowhere except to a legislative impasse that will almost certainly increase the pressure for an early adjournment of Congress.

Eisler Free

People behind the iron curtain will never understand the release of Gerhart Eisler on orders of a British Magistrate's Court, and it is quite probable that many Americans will not. In similar circumstances no one convicted of crime in an iron curtain country and fleeing to another iron curtain country would have had the slightest chance of freedom. But, of course, no true liberal would wish the case to be handled in that fashion in a land where justice prevails. The only thing that is certain to trouble those who understand the operations of a judicial system in a free country is the difference in the concept of perjury in the United States and England.

As we understand the case, Eisler was convicted of making three false statements on his application for an "exit permit." There is no question about his commission of the crime of perjury under American law. Lawyers of the State and Justice Departments asked Great Britain to intervene on the assumption that the fleeing convict could be extradited under the British-American treaty which clearly covers perjury cases. But perjury in England has a different meaning from that given to it in American law. Only those who swear falsely in a judicial proceeding are guilty of perjury there. Persons who swear falsely under oath in the making of documents, as did Eisler in this country, are guilty only of "false swearing," which is a separate crime not specifically covered by the extradition treaty. The British court naturally held to the British concept of perjury in construing the treaty.

The important point is that an impartial operation of the law has not been impeded by political considerations. That is a matter on which the British magistrate may well be congratulated. Eisler was entitled to a fair and impartial application of the law, without regard for the fact that he is reputed to have been the brains of the Communist underground in the United States. Far more important than the return to this country of a Communist law violator is the fair and honest administration of the law by independent judges whose decisions all free men are willing to accept.

Forrestal And Pearson

I am writing to you to express my support of a free press. I have been deeply concerned, as a private individual, over the violent criticism aimed at your columnist Drew Pearson in connection with the suicide of James Forrestal. What certain critical columnists fail to realize is that in criticizing Pearson, they are undermining the very thing they should be fighting to support—a press that knows no restrictions.

It is difficult to understand how they justify their approach to Pearson's connection with the Forrestal suicide. Forrestal did not bear the brunt of Pearson's criticism alone. There have been many other figures in public life who have felt his sharp pen—there have been many other figures in public life who have experienced considerable disappointment.

Even more important, in Forrestal's case, it would seem, as an ordinary onlooker, that on the whole Forrestal received very favorable treatment from the press, almost suspiciously so, as was evidenced by the Life magazine story, the Saturday Evening Post story, the compliments paid him by the San Francisco Chronicle, and his backing by a certain clique of newsmen who always threw him bouquets. Certainly with this to fall back on, Pearson's comments would have been far outweighed by the friends Forrestal made in the newspaper world.

Under these circumstances to say that Pearson's attack on Forrestal had anything to do with his suicide would seem to me to be hysterical ignorance and nothing more.

And to say that any newsman could drive a public figure to his death is even more ridiculous when one remembers the criticism that has been leveled at such figures as Herbert Hoover, Harold Ickes, Frances Perkins, Winston Churchill, the Roosevelt family in general. Furthermore, from the point of view of extreme disappointment, certainly Tom Dewey received a much greater blow than Forrestal ever experienced last November.

I feel, therefore, that if American newspapermen want to maintain a free press—which is their bread and butter—they would do well to think again before they blacken Pearson's name on this score. Their harpings will do little more than disgust intelligent people and aid and abet those who would, for personal reason, like to eliminate freedom of the press. E. L.

Payments In Gold

Canada has been receiving a lot of her United States dollars in the roundabout way of ECA funds payable to Britain being spent in Canada.

Canada now is facing a black prospect of austerity which, due to the ECA payments and United States war spending, has been delayed, but is almost inevitable.

If and when Canada feels the full force of United States dollar shortage it will be felt in shortages of steel, coal, oil and cotton and consequently unemployment.

Mr. Ernest Bevin came pretty close to the most promising solution a couple of years ago, when he suggested a redistribution of the world's monetary supply of gold. However, most of the gold would have quickly found its way back to the USA and the same difficult situation would have returned.

But, the best solution is for balance payments to be made in gold. That is the way balances have always been paid (excepting the periods when silver was also acceptable).

The difficulty with applying this principle now is that there is not enough gold (newly mined) to pay the balance at the present price of gold. The price of gold is controlled almost entirely by the United States. It would be 10 dollars an ounce or $100. No matter what the price is, the gold is almost sure to flow to the United States (until the rest of the world becomes industrialized). The United States price, at present, is $35 an ounce.

If the price of gold is increased sufficiently, gold payments would prevent a collapse in the British and Canadian economy. This would create bigger markets for United States goods and perhaps prevent a depression in the United States.

It would make Russia (a big gold producer) a market for United States goods and probably cause so much friendship as to put an end to the rivalry between communism and capitalism.

Military Pay

The men in Congress who have killed the pay raises for the armed services are the same men who voted themselves an extra nontaxable $2500 a year, who have funds which they do not have to account for from which to pay assistants and relatives, who pay themselves 20 cents per mile for railway travel, who have allowances for stationery which they can draw in cash.

The "perquisites" which seem to disturb Congressman Sutton may be given to the few generals, but they do not apply to the great mass of commissioned and noncommissioned officers who are trying to educate families, while maintaining the appearance which they are required to maintain in dress and manner of living.

In every drive, for Community Chest, Red Cross, Cancer Fund, etc., the armed services are always appealed to and always do their full share. It is a injustice that they must now be delayed in getting a long-postponed adjustment in pay which the pressure groups in civil service, labor and elsewhere have been able to gain for themselves. The turning back of this bill by Congress is going to impair definitely the morale of the armed services.

Communism In Spain

Mr. Samuel H. Butterfield's letter of May 18 on the Spanish so-called civil war brings up some too-soon-forgotten points.

Beyond a doubt, Spain in early 1936 was a moderate, democratic republic, dominated by idealists who were trying to establish, in a backward, feudal, agrarian country a modern Western-type industrial democracy. There were indications that, with the awakening of a new political consciousness among the Spanish people, they would have eventually succeeded if their work had not been interrupted by the Fascist counter-revolution.

After the overthrow of the monarchy, the republic had experienced various vicissitudes. Several times, reactionary rightist groups had contrived to recapture power via the ballot. However, in the February, 1936, elections, all the leftist and moderate groups, including, a very small Communist group, had joined forces in a Popular Front and had swept to victory.

The new republic separated church and state, and began establishing a secular public school system. It expropriated the big, hereditary, feudal landlords and confiscated the vast church lands—with amazingly fair and just compensation to the dispossessed, who, however, soon showed that they would never be satisfied with that—and proceeded to divide up the confiscated lands and holdings among the peasants. It left the dispossessed old ruling classes all their freedoms and rights. It encouraged the growth of labor unions and undertook a modern health and sanitation program.

The Spanish explosion, in its opening phases, was a war between Spanish Fascists and anti-Fascists, between the people and their popularly elected government, on the one hand, and the old, dispossessed ruling classes and reactionary elements on the other. The Communists, few in number, fought on the anti-Fascist side because they had no place else to go. Russian policy and the party line at that time called for popular front alliances against the trend toward fascism.

With the coming of large-scale German and Italian aid to Franco's rebels, the war turned into an act of open German and Italian aggression against the Spanish Republic. The United States, which had been rapidly isolationist since World War I, and which was infected with the Red scare, turned a cold shoulder to the desperate republicans. Great Britain and France, also turned their backs. The League of Nations was helpless. So Germany and Italy, with some aid from Portugal, did the same thing to Spain that Russia is doing today to China and, through her satellites, to Greece.

Russian aid to the Loyalists never equaled the scale of German and Italian aid. Spain fell to the Fascists after a desperate and wholly unequal struggle of nearly three years. Economically, she was ruined. Externally, Spain became a stoogeally of the Axis Powers.

Too many people in the democracies were slow and confused about recognizing fascism as the main world threat from about 1933 on to 1945. They were so blinded by fear of communism that, since the early 1920s, they mistook it for the major world threat which, again thanks to democratic bungling, it has actually become since 1945.

The Russian popular front policy of self-defense, the Western democracies could have turned to their own ends by building an adequate solid front, externally and internally everywhere, against the further expansion of fascism without opening the way to a corresponding expansion of communism, such as we are suffering today.

Franco will undoubtedly be an ally of ours in any war with Russia in the near future because he will have to be—just as Stalin had to be our ally against Germany after June 22, 1941. We should have learned by this time that democracies don't strengthen democracy as a world force by allying themselves with dictatorships. Continued support of Franco may permanently alienate the Spanish people, as well as other western European peoples, from democracy and drive them into the arms of communism.

Uncrowned Consumers

By Malvina Lindsay

Market Mystery

HAVING HEARD on all sides that the consumer was about to become "king," I set out to claim my crown. Yes, surely the long-awaited buyers' market was here! Had not the new Sears, Roebuck catalogue listed price cuts up to 50 per cent? Weren't homes once more being furnished by means of box-top prizes? Weren't sales signs again plastered on store windows? Wasn't employment tightening?

Yes, the good old prewar days when you could find what you were looking for at a price you could pay, and be served by someone who treated you at least as an equal, must have slipped in!

With my new regal posture I advanced on the marts of trade. I met my neighbor at the corner. She was tenderly carrying her jewel box. "Look!" she said opening it. It contained two lamb chops. "That's meager fare for royalty," I protested. "Besides, I thought prices were down." "Oh, but lamb is scarce this spring—it's a long explanation—something to do with breeding and with marketing costs. I could have gotten pot roast but I didn't dare ask the butcher to cut only 3 pounds."

I entered a department store confident an unctuous floorwalker would leap to my side. None appeared. I approached the information desk with prewar confidence. "Where are coronets, please?" I inquired of a young woman with deadpan countenance who was staring into space. Without looking at me, she murmured something indistinguishable.

AFTER LONG waits at several totally deserted counters I debated whether to gain attention by walking away with some merchandise, or to seek a floor manager and assert my kingship. I decided on the latter course.

It's the help problem, I was told. No one can hire anybody who's capable—let alone polite. Nobody wants to work, except for movie star salaries. Later I asked a grim-visaged saleswoman about the missing face with a smile. "Who's going to do any smiling on what we get?" she inquired.

A little less regally I went about my shopping. No, the shoe model I liked was not in stock in my size. No, the blue one next to it was not available in black or brown. Yes, the price was actually $22.50. Yes, leather had dropped some, but look at the cost of production—labor and all that. And shoe manufacturers were cutting output.

I looked in on a suit sale. No use to wait till fall in the hope of price cuts, I was told. Suits might even be higher if there was a fabric shortage. Textile houses were cutting production. . . .

Still reluctant to abandon my royal role, I continued my search for summer merchandise. But it seemed I should have bought what I wanted in February or at least March. Stocks were getting low. Everyone was thinking about fall now. "But," I protested, "I've been reading that since the consumer is king, seasonal buying has returned, and we're no longer expected to scramble through snowstorms for midsummer clothes."

But, I was told, merchants now have to be cautious about their stocks, even though they can get the goods. Nobody can tell what the consumer's going to do. . . .

AFTER A LONG wait in line at a restaurant I sat down prepared to order with regal leisure. But an impatient waitress was tapping the table with her pencil. A line of customers was waiting. "Just like the old days before I was king," I thought. I paid the cashier on my way out. "Umhuh," she said, as she handed me my change.

I continued my shopping feeling a peasantlike stoop coming over me. I even loaded myself with parcels instead of ordering them delivered. In this condition I encountered a member of the merchant prince class. "How come," I asked "that I'm still a worm, and not a king? Why is there nobody to wait on me with a smile—or even to wait on me? Why can't I find things in my size and color? And what's become of our old friends, production and competition? Why haven't they taken care of prices?"

"Everything will be worked out in time," he said soothingly, "by the law of supply and demand. But of course you must consider first the cost-plus factor in relation to the underlying statistical position of the inventory index as related to the collateral rise of the wage graph in its bearing on the backlog of bearish psychology——"

"Excuse me," I interrupted, "it's raining! I must away to my palace—I mean my ashes!" Finally halting a taxi, I dropped two of my parcels as I opened the door—unaided.

Attack On Lilienthal

The attack being made on Dave Lilienthal is only a smoke screen to get control of the atomic discover[illegible] This is probably the m[illegible] important battle now facing the Senate and the American people.

Dave Lilienthal hasn't a drop of disloyal blood in his makeup and has earned recognition as one of the great administrators of our time. All talk to the contrary is nonsense and designed to serve interests which obviously are not for the benefit of the whole people.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Johnson's Connections

WHEN A man stops being a successful lawyer in private practice or a successful businessman and takes a responsible Government position, can he finally and effectively sever his previous connections? Can he reach disinterested decisions when his former concerns are immediately involved in Government business?

Childs

These are the questions, it seems to me, behind the proposal to investigate the awarding of large new contracts for B-36 bombers to the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp. of San Diego. Until he became Secretary of Defense, Louis Johnson was a director of that company and he has a close association with Floyd Odlum, the financier, who is said to control Consolidated Vultee.

Quite properly, in my opinion, Congress should try to get the facts about the performance of the B-36 and the technical findings back of the decision to concentrate on production of that plane. That is a matter of which the public has every right to information.

But it is unfair to prejudge the integrity of the decision because of Johnson's previous associations. Only a complete neutral, who has never had any connections of any sort, political or business, can escape that kind of bias.

With business and Government increasingly entwined, as in the airplane industry, this becomes one of the most difficult and troubling relationships. Behind closed doors when Johnson's name was before the Senate Armed Services Committee, it was threshed out with Johnson present.

MEMBERS of the committee had asked to have put in the record a letter from Johnson's Charleston, W. Va.-New York-Washington law firm stating that his connection with the firm was severed. There was some dissatisfaction with the letter, which in the essential passage read as follows:

"As previously agreed, you will not participate in the firm or in its earnings in any way during the period of your Government service. It was further agreed that, knowingly, this firm will neither be counsel for nor directly or indirectly represent any party or interest having business with the National Defense Establishment."

This did not satisfy Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia. The discussion in closed session went as follows:

Senator Byrd: Mr. Johnson's name remains as head man on the form, on the stationery, and that carries with it a great prestige and influence. He holds this vitally important position, and furthermore, he just said that he owns a share of the assets of the firm, and will continue to own them . . . I don't think we can say he is completely out of the firm.

Chairman Tydings: Not a share of its assets . . .

Senator Byrd: Why not liquidate and we will forget about it?

Mr. Johnson: You are going to make me take a lot more financial losses.

Senator Byrd: If you are in the firm, you cannot be out of it.

PRESSING his point, the conscientious Byrd referred to the Consolidated Vultee contracts for "two or three hundred million dollars," that had been approved. Johnson replied that this was not through "any knowledge or assistance of mine." Then Byrd made this significant statement:

"They did get two or three hundred million dollars in contracts from the Government recently, and I think there ought to be a clear division and understanding such as we thought we had over the telephone when we voted favorably on your nomination, because our chairman discussed the matter, and the language was 'had no dealings with the Government'; we mentioned that time and time again and I don't think that should be restricted. That was a gentlemen's agreement we had and we agreed that your nomination should be reported by the chairman, provided these letters were satisfactory, which they have proven not to be, to certain members of the committee, in the language they contain now."

Johnson should welcome a thorough investigation just as David Lilienthal has assured Congress that he looks forward to putting on the record the whole story of the progress made by the Atomic Energy Commission. Unhappily in Johnson's case there is the complication of his role last fall as collector of Democratic campaign contributions.

Some of the contributions came from the businessmen whose firms are now getting large contracts. The only remedy here, it seems to me, is to end the whole system of contributions-in-anticipation-of-favors. Let Congress appropriate sufficient funds every four years to defray the cost of all campaign expenses. That would be a lot less costly to the taxpayer in the long run.

Walter Denies Any Pressure In James Case

By The Associated Press

Representative Walter (D., Pa.) told a Senate Civil Service subcommittee yesterday he "never used or attempted to use any influence" to have Roy E. James removed from his $8500-a-year Government job.

James, a Republican, ran unsuccessfully against Walter in last fall's congressional election. The Congressman said in a letter received by the subcommittee yesterday:

"I never used or attempted to use any influence in having this man (James) removed from his position. Nor did I at any time request that a loyalty check be made.

"My sole interest in this matter was and is to determine what device was resorted to in order to circumvent the Civil Service laws to place hime in a position which obviously he is not qualified to fill.

"According to my information, the Department of the Army set up certain specifications for the position to which Mr. James was appointed. The hiring officials of the department, knowing better than anyone else what these specifications were, saw fit to ignore them in making this appointment.

"I would like to know the reason for this and why the Civil Service Commission was prevented from making its usual check of the appointee's qualifications."

Walter added that if the committee wished to question him "I will be available at any time."

affecting the center also "silenced" Father Feeney for his support of three professors dismissed from Boston College. The teachers contended there is no salvation outside the Catholic church and were discharged for teaching that doctrine in the Catholic college, operated by priests of the Jesuit Order.

Hasn't Made Submission

The "silencing" of Father Feeney barred him from performing his priestly functions until he made "total submission" to his superiors. He has not yet done so.

Father Feeney said St. Benedict's Center was reopened to the public tonight for the first time since the Archbishop's decree.

On the controversial point raised by the professors, the Baltimore Catechism, used in instructing all Catholics, reads: "He who knows the church to be the true church and remains out of it cannot be saved. . . . This does not apply to men of good faith that belong to the soul of the church."

The catechism defines "the soul of the church" as "all that possess God's grace even if they are not actual members."

Truman Sails On Weekend Bay Cruise

President Truman will spend the Memorial Day weekend aboard the presidential yacht, the Williamsburg, with a few friends and staff members.

The party left at 4:30 p. m. (EDT) yesterday for a cruise along the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay and will return at 5 p. m. Monday.

Accompanying the President were Fleet Admiral Wiliam D. Leahy, Presidential Secretary William D. Hassett, Chief Counsel Clark Clifford, Assistant Press Secretary Eben Ayres, Judge Richmond B. Keech of the District Court here, and George J. Schoeneman, Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

The plan was to anchor last night near the mouth of the Potomac, and tonight off Patuxent, in Chesapeake Bay.

The ship will anchor Sunday from 9 a. m. (EDT) to 3 p. m. (EDT) off Annapolis and the President and his party will be ashore to attend divine services. Anchorage Sunday night again will be off the Potomac's mouth.

John R. Steelman, assistant to the President, will join the party Sunday at Annapolis.

10 a.m.—Cabinet.

11:15—Joseph K. Carson, of Maritime Commission.

11:30—Mayor Erastus Corning of Albany, N. Y., with Leo Quinn.

Gen. Fleming Confirmed As Maritime Chief

The Senate yesterday unanimously confirmed the nomination of Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming (ret.) to be chairman of the United States Maritime Commission.

Fleming, now head of the Federal Works Agency, succeeds Admiral William Ward Smith.

The Senate held over until Tuesday the nomination of Thomas C. Buchanan of Pennsylvania to be a member of the Federal Power Commission. Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.) asked that it be put aside at the request of a Republican Senator whom he did not name.

Paper Charges Labor Foes Try To 'Destroy' It

Flora, Ill., May 27 (AP).—An attempt to foreclose a mortgage on a Flora semiweekly newspaper is being made in what its publisher declares is a "battle for freedom of the press."

Charles A. Crowder, publisher of the Sentinel, said a group of Flora men are trying to close down his newspaper because he refused to omit strike news and editorial comment "favorable to unions" during recent labor disputes here.

He said the "real fight" began when he refused to omit news and editorial comment concerning a labor dispute in which several Flora municipal plant workers quit after failing to win recognition of their union, Local 702 of the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Got Mortgage From Bank

Mrs. Pauline Colborn, secretary-treasurer of the Flora Record Publishing Co., which publishes the daily News-Record, said she got the mortgage from the White County State Bank of Carmi, but she added:

"I got the mortgage on my own initiative and not in my capacity on the News-Record. It had nothing to do with any labor dispute as far as I'm concerned."

She declined to comment further. Others involved declined to comment.

Crowder purchased the newspaper in 1945. Two years ago he obtained a $9000 loan from the White County State Bank and bought a press from the Carmi Democrat-Tribune.

He said Mrs. Colborn learned he was behind in his payments on the principal and interest on the loan and that she acted as "the contact" in purchase of his mortgage by a group of Flora men.

He said E. D. Given, an oil distributor, is acting as trustee for the group that now owns the mortgage—including a number of Flora businessmen.

Court proceedings have been continued until June 23. Crowder has posted $10,000 bond and is continuing publication.

Crowder said there was an attempt to "boycott" his newspaper after it carried the labor news and comment.

He said Flora labor unions now are seeking to raise the money to prevent "destruction" of his newspaper.

In a page 1 box in his May 20 issue, he said in part:

"There can be no middle ground. Either freedom of the press will live and flourish in Flora—or it will die here, because no other newspaper could be started successfully if we are defeated.

"This newspaper will never surrender."

Crowder and his wife acquired the newspaper to turn over to their son, George, when he returned from the war. George was killed in action on Luzon, Philippines, in May, 1945.

Flora is a community of about 6000 persons in south central Illinois.

Transportation Project Completed in Greece

NYHT News Service

Completion of a 29-million-dollar program invilving resconstruction of essential transportation facilities throughout Greece was announced yesterday.

Government spokesmen said ect"—which included 1000 miles that the "record construction proj- of first-rate highways, three major ports and more than two miles of bridges and railway tunnels—had been finished in just over a year's work. Total time required for the job, they said, was 20 months but at least six of these were spent in assembling the required materials and personnel.

'Cheap' Flats Opposed by Maryland U.

The University of Maryland board of regents yesterday urged denial of further liquor licenses and building permits for "cheap apartment developments" near the College Park campus.

The board passed the resolutions at the behest of President H. C. Byrd who said "we have some things around here which are terrible." The action of the board, he said, would strengthen the university's opposition to the additional permits.

Other Actions

In other actions, the board:

1. Deferred discussion of the applications of several Negroes for admission to the graduate school and the engineering department. Dr. Byrd commented that "this is a problem the next session of the Legislature must face. We are facing it right now."

2. Discussed with a 12-member committee of the House of Delegates what the committee chairman said were "persistent reports" that physical expansion had priority at the university over the educational program. Dr. Byrd said the reports were untrue and Chairman William P. Cole, jr., of the board of regents, said "the board is perfectly satisfied with the university's educational standing."

3. Deferred action until June 6 on approving the allocations of the university's 13-million-dollar budget and heard Dr. Byrd report that a detailed budget would not be ready for the February session of the Legislature. This subject created one of the hottest controversies at the recent Legislature, a controversy settled in Dr. Byrd's favor.

Notes Liquor Places

Dr. Byrd told the regents that "several cheap apartment developments have taken place in the general vicinity of the university . . . that do not do much credit to a neighborhood such as is developing at College Park."

He reported also that "within a mile or so of the university's gateway, there are at present 20 liquor and beer establishments."

World Bank Mission to Study Iraq Economy

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development yesterday announced it is sending a mission to Iraq at the request of the Iraq government to study the country's economy and to investigate flood control projects in the Tigris and Euphrates valleys.

The mission will leave for Baghdad Sunday, and will be there for several weeks. It will consist of E. A. Bayne, a loan officer, William G. Welk, the Bank's chief economist for Africa and the Middle East; and Maj. Gen. Glen E. Edgerton, who has been retained as a technical engineering adviser to the mission.

For the past several days two representatives of the Iraq government have been in Washington discussing the mission with bank officials. They are H. E. Towfig al-Suwaidi, former Prime Minister and presently chief of the Iraq delegation to the United Nations, and H. E. Ali Momtayz, former Minister of Finance.

Much Insanity Among Aged Due to Idleness, Doctors Told

Montreal, Que., May 27 (AP).—The United States is driving its aging population into mental asylums and hospitals for hopeless infirmities by giving them nothing to do, the American Psychiatric Association was told today.

Work would save them, work would bring out of bed many described by doctors as "hopeless," said Dr. Howard A. Rusk.

Dr. Rusk is professor and chairman of the department of rehabilitation and physical medicine, New York University.

A new era for mental illness, relying more on drugs than on talk for cures, was forecast to the psychiatric association today by Dr. William B. Terhune, New Canaan, Conn. Dr. Terhune said three-fifths of mental disorders now are accepted as basically organic.

Bodily causes of psychiatric disorders now accepted, he said, are infections, intoxication, injuries, blood circulation disturbances, convulsive troubles, growth, nutrition and hormones.

Top Questions on Sales Levy Are Given 'Curbstone' Answers

Some of the questions most frequently asked yesterday about the District sales tax and "curbstone" answers by Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson and Assistant Corporation Counsel George C. Updegraff, who helped draft the revenue bill, follow:

Will a Virginia resident who has a charge account with a Washington store be required to pay a sales tax on merchandise delivered to her home? No.

If she decides to take the items with her, will the tax be imposed? No, because the charge account will be considered evidence of her Virginia residence.

If a District resident buys a car in Virginia, will he be able to purchase District license tags and avoid payment of the sales tax? No, because he will have to pay the tax here before he can get a District title to the vehicle.

If a District resident treats several friends to meals costing less than $1.25 each, but more than $1.25 in total, will he be liable for the sales tax? No, since the tax is computed on individual meals and those costing less than $1.25 are exempted.

If a District resident orders merchandise from mail order firms in other States, will the sales tax be charged? No, since the law carries a specific section saying it shall not interfere with interstate commerce.

Will five and ten cent stores be required to charge a sales tax on each individual sale above 14 cents? No, the tax is on gross accounts, and a merchant may arrange a method whereby a customer pays the tax on the total sale, rather than be penalized by paying a tax on several small ones.

Civic Federation to Protest Police Ball Team Racial Ban

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett will be asked by the Federation of Civic Associations to direct that all qualified members of the police force, regardless of race or color, be permitted to play on the department baseball team.

This action was voted last night at the civic body's meeting in the District Building following a report of its recreation committee that a Negro policeman had been barred from team play.

J. F. N. Wilkinson, committee chairman, said he was told by Tenth Precinct Capt. Irvin H. Umbaugh, the team's manager, that the Negro policeman had survived preliminary cuts and was a team member until it was decided that he would not be permitted to play contests under the District Recreation Department segregation policies.

The federation also voted to request the Senate District Committee to conduct public hearings during which Commissioner John Russell Young could be questioned on civic matters before being reappointed.

It was voted in addition, to request President Truman not to reappoint James H. Flanagan to the Public Utilities Commission. Recommendation was made that the appointee be "someone more likely to be influenced by the people's mandates." Flanagan was charged from the floor with being "subservient to the holding companies."

In other action, the group decided to send letters to the Board of Education and to the Board of Commissioners asking that each instruct its representative on the Recreation Board to vote to discontinue segregation on playgrounds at the recreation body's June 18 meeting.

Member associations were asked to submit names of four volunteers to assist the admitting office at Gallinger Hospital in registering visitors on Sunday afternoons following a report by Dr. Edward F. Harris that Sunday visiting hours had been eliminated.

Dr. Harris said he was told by Dr. Philip A. E. Stebbing, Gallinger superintendent, that the action was taken after continued crowds of visitors disrupted the hospital routine by necessitating use of other types of personnel for registering purposes. On weekdays, volunteers of the Federation of Churches perform this added work, he said.

The federation indorsed the McGrath bill to permit purchase of dogs from the District Pound by medical institutions for experimental purposes following a favorable report by Dr. Jesse Keene, chairman of the health and sanitation committee.

Hoffman Predicts Top ECA Changes; Says He'll Remain

Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation Administrator, said yesterday after a White House visit that there will be "a couple of changes in top jobs" in his agency.

He emphasized that he is not resigning and will not be involved in the shifts. He refused to elaborate.

One change may involve Deputy Recovery Administrator Howard Bruce, who wants to return to his private banking and industrial business in Baltimore. He has been asked not to retire until Hoffman returns from a three or four week tour of Europe, scheduled for the near future.

ECA officials said the shifts would not involve Roving Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, his deputy, William C. Foster, or Richard M. Bissell, jr., Bruce's assistant.

Matthews Will Give Address To Naval Academy '49 Class

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Annapolis, May 27 (Spl.)—Newly sworn Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews will deliver the Naval Academy's commencement address at next Friday's graduation ceremony, the academy announced today.

The announcement came as this town was already beginning to fill up with relatives of midshipmen arriving for June Week beginning Saturday.

Among the arrivals was one who is not a relative but something doubtless more important—a sweetheart.

Blond, blue-eyed Marie Badecker, color girl for the non-stop graduation-week doings, came to town.

The 22-year-old Teaneck, N. J., girl won the honor by being the fiancee of Midshipman George M. Benas, jr., of Utica, N. Y., whose company took top honors at the academy giving him the privilege of having his girl reign over the belles who will descend on the academy for rounds of parties.

She has much more even than these festivities to look forward to. Her wedding to Benas will take place at a church in Teaneck on June 4, the day after he discards his midshipman's uniform for ensign's boards.

It will include arched swords—Navy style, Miss Badecker said.

Her husband will be stationed at tthe academy through the summer, then go to Pensacola for flight training.

June Week opens at 1 p. m. Saturday with sailing on the Severn River, followed by tennis on Har-Tru courts and lacrosse in Thompson Stadium. Big events of the day are two dances at 9:15 p. m.: the class of 1950 ring dance in MacDonough Hill and the first and third classes hop in Dahlgren Hall.

The baccalaureate sermon will follow the next day.

Secretary Matthews' address at 11 a. m. Friday June 3 before the 792 graduating Midshipmen will climax the week.

Uranium Finds May Bring Wealth To Navajo Nation

Phoenix, Ariz., May 27 (U.P.).—The impoverished Navajo Indian nation may become wealthy as a result of uranium finds on their reservation, the State director of mineral resources said today.

Charles H. Dunning, head of the mineral department, said upon returning from a survey of the reservation in northeastern Arizona that the Indian lands may become the greatest source of uranium in the United States.

He said the Vanadium Co. of America was operating five uranium mines on acreage leased from the Indians and the Navajos have signed 30 additional leases on claims that may contain the fissionable metal.

Church to Study Reorganizing Plan

Montreat, N. C., May 27 (AP).—A determined effort to put the drastic reorganization plan for the Southern Presbyterian Church on ice for a year was defeated today by the General Assembly.

The plan would abolish 5 of the church's 30 agencies and modify the functions of 10 others to reduce duplication and overlapping of activities.

The plan will be discussed on a chapter by chapter basis and voted point by point as a first order of business.

Reports of a score or more committees were carried over.

The assembly had before it 70 overtures—resolutions—and communications for eventual action.

Sixteen of the overtures involved an apology to the family of Lunsford Richardson, founder of Vick Chemical Corp.

The apologies were for charges contained in a lawsuit in Federal court over the purchase of 225 shares of stock left the First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, N. C.

Another overture asked support of a move to amend the Constitution of the United States to make this country a "Christian Nation" officially.

Another communication asked that any plans for a nonsegregated meeting between young white and Negro students be held up until approved by the assembly.

Wartime pastors of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, 1301 New York ave. nw., will be commemorated at a memorial service at 8 p. m. Sunday at the church.

Speaker at the service will be Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.). The combined church choirs of 160 voices will present a special musical program.

The pastors to be honored are:

Dr. James Laurie, pastor from 1803 to 1853, who led the church during the War of 1812 and the Mexican War. During his pastorate all of the church records were burned when the British invaded Washington.

Dr. Phineas D. Gurley, pastor from 1853 to 1868, who brought about the union of the F Street and Second Presbyterian Church and built the present church building in 1859. He officiated at President Lincoln's funeral.

Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, pastor from 1894 to 1922, who ministered to the New York Avenue congregation during the Spanish-American War and World War I. He served as moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., in 1898.

Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor from 1937 to 1949 and chaplain of the United States Senate from 1947 until his death in January of this year. Dr. Marshall's sermons during World War II were broadcast to the armed forces and in printed form were sent to men and women all over the world.

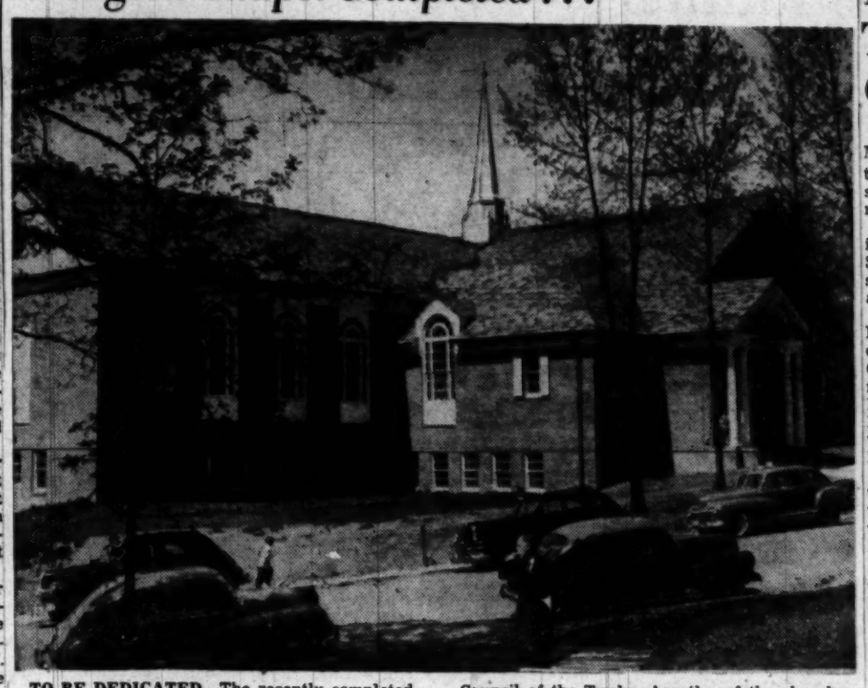
Arlington Chapel Completed . . .



TO BE DEDICATED—The recently completed Arlington Chapel, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 16th and Inglewood sts., Arlington. Ezra T. Benson, member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the church, will represent the general authorities at ceremonies dedicating the new church on Monday at 10 a. m.

Dedication Of Chapel Set For Sunday

A $60,000 chapel, the first unit of Calvary Lutheran Church, 9845 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., will be dedicated at three services Sunday.

The Rev. Carl A. Koerber, former pastor of the church, will officiate at the service at 11 a. m. The Rev. Rudolph S. Ressmeyer of Baltimore, president of the Southeastern District of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, will officiate at the 4 p. m. service and the Rev. William F. Bruening, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, 5101 16th st. nw., will speak at 8 p. m.

First services of the church were held in the Silver Spring Masonic Hall in October, 1941. Later the congregation met in a store building at 9601 Georgia ave., where services were held until December, 1947.

Since then services have been held in Montgomery Hills Junior High School. Ground for the chapel was broken last August.

Pastor Koerber served the church as a missionary and later as full time pastor until November, 1946. The present pastor is the Rev. George Hoyer, who was installed in April, 1947.

The new chapel, built of native granite, is Gothic in style and will seat 60 persons. An adjoining overflow room will seat an additional 100 persons.

Benson Here For Mormon Conference

Ezra T. Benson, member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will represent the general authorities of the church at the quarterly conference of the Washington Stake today and Sunday.

He will speak at a general priesthood meeting today at 7:30 p. m. and at general sessions at 10 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. at the Mormon Chapel, 16th st. and Columbia rd. nw. The Washington Stake includes 10 wards in Greater Washington, Northern Virginia and Maryland.

Apostle Benson will also deliver the dedicatory sermon and prayer at ceremonies at the new Arlington ward chapel of the church at 16th and Inglewood sts., Arlington, at 10 a. m. Monday. Arlington ward is a unit within the Washington Stake.

The chapel, erected at a cost of about $200,000, has been under construction since last fall. Members of the ward did much of the labor on the new building to cut costs. During the past week a number of special dedication events have been held at the chapel.

Orthodox Greek Chapel Planned

Plans for an Orthodox Greek Catholic memorial chapel in Washington are being made by a group of young people under the direction of the Very Rev. N. J. Woloshuk of Ambridge, Pa.

Ground for the chapel has not been selected yet, but plans for a Nation-wide drive for $100,000 will be launched soon, Father Woloshuk said. Religious services are held at the Washington Cathedral on the last Sunday of each month and the group meets at the parish hall of St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, during the month.

Fr. McCallum Altar to Be Consecrated

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will dedicate the high altar at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 2430 K st. nw., Sunday at 11 a. m.

McCallum

Designed by Kelsey Y. Saint, junior warden of the church, the limestone altar is inscribed as "The Thank Offering to God of St. Paul's Parish for the Life and Ministry of Arlington A. McCallum, priest, rector, 1924-1949."

Father McCallum, who observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of his rectorship in February, will retire June 1 to become rector emeritus. The Rev. James Richards, associate rector of St. Paul's since December, will succeed Father McCallum as rector.

Combined choirs of St. Paul's, under the direction of Russell H. Hinds, organist and choirmaster, will sing, and Samuel A. Leech, who played at the first services Father McCallum conducted in St. Paul's, will assist. Ross H. Hunter, who was crucifer at that service, will act in that office at the service Sunday.

The retiring rector was born and educated in Canada, and graduated from Seabury Divinity School, Faribault, Minn. He served churches in Wyoming, Illinois, Minnesota and Pennsylvania before coming here in 1924.

Under Father McCallum's leadership the congregation of the church moved from an 80-year-old building to the $180,000 structure which was dedicated last summer. The old church was razed to make room for George Washington University Hospital.

The priest was a chaplain in both World Wars, and will continue as chaplain of the Soldiers' Home after retirement. He has been a National Guard chaplain since 1912, was chaplain of the Military Order of the World Wars from 1931 to 1934, and president of the Army and Navy Chaplains Association from 1934 to 1938.

Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor emeritus of Temple Baptist Church, 1013 N st. nw., will speak on "Forty Years a Pastor in the Nation's Capital" at 11 a. m. at the church. In his 40 years here, Dr. Briggs has received nearly 5000 persons into membership at Temple and Fifth Baptist Churches.

Miss Torkington

Nursing Chief At Children's Gets Top Post

Miss Edith A. Torkington, one-time assistant director of nursing at Children's Hospital, was appointed its administrator yesterday.

The appointment was voted in meeting of the hospital board of directors. She succeeds to the position vacated by John D. Martin in March to accept a similar post at Columbia Hospital.

Miss Torkington's services at Children's began in nursing more than 20 years ago after graduation from the Corning School of Nursing, Corning, N. Y. She became assistant director of nursing, and for eight years was superintendent at the Children's Country Home here.

During the war she entered the Army, attained the rank of captain, and served as chief nurse of the Thirty-eighth Field Hospital, in the Pacific area. Upon her return she was graduated from Catholic University of American School of Nursing Education, and served at Children's for a short period as administrative assistant before her promotion yesterday.

Led by Chief Justice Fred Vinson, members of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia yesterday paid tribute to those members who have died since Memorial Day last year, in services held in the United States Court of Appeals courtroom.

Austin F. Canfield said in his memorial address that the 26 deceased members through their work "condemned those who accept the liberties guaranteed by the Bill of Rights and then accept the protection of that bill to plot against freedom."

He told the dignitaries of bar and bench present at the ceremony that those who had passed away were devoted husbands and fathers, and that no scandal had ever arisen to embarrass them.

Those present included Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court, Chief Judge Harold N. Stephens of the United States Court of Appeals, Chief Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court of Appeals, and other judges of these courts and of Municipal Court.

Godfrey L. Munter, chairman of the memorial committee, presided. Bar Association President Lowry N. Coe opened the program. The invocation was given by Rear Admiral William N. Thomas, Chief of Chaplains, United States Navy.

Senate to Act On Home Rule

determine by their own votes the members of their local city government and school board.

He said that in every American community except the District, the local government is answerable to those it governs and responsible to their wishes.

He said the question of District home rule comes up now, not because it wasn't considered by the founding fathers, but because the Congres of 1874 saw fit to take away the local suffrage Washington residents had enjoyed since 1802.

"There's no doubt about the fact that the founding fathers intended the inhabitants of the District to have representative local self-government," said Holland.

He cited that Madison's declaration in the Federalist Papers that the original plan for the District called for its residents to have a "municipal legislature derived from their own suffrages."

The fact that the present Commissioner system has functioned with varying success, said Holland, is "by no means sufficient reason to neglect the concept of the founding fathers."

"We cannot continue longer," said Holland, "to deprive the citizens of this area of the right to exercise through citizens of their own choosing the ordinary powers of local government."

Holland said he had found among Washington residents a "lackadaisical" attitude toward their city government. He said he had been "surprised and somewhat shocked" to find excellent citizens of Washington more concerned about whether the gasoline tax would be 2 or 3 cents than about the question of local self-government.

He declared the present system is "drifting from bad to worse."

He said Washington has an "exceedingly large number of crimes," much larger proportionally than the nearest cities of Baltimore and Richmond, where the population composition is about the same.

He said the present system is bad, too, because members of Congress must give primary attention to the needs of their own districts and to the pressing problems of national legislation.

"The District and its needs are bound to come last, and too often they came at long last," said Holland.

He listed some of the bills Congress has had to handle for the District—bills on starlings, drinking straws, barbers, street names, and added:

"Maybe it is sound government to encumber the time, minds, energies and strength of the members of Congress with that kind of detail, but I think it's very bad democracy and very bad government."

Kefauver, opening debate on the bill as chairman of the District Subcommittee that drafted it, said, "This is a momentous day in the District—for the first time in three quarters of a century the Senate is considering a bill for District home rule."

He said Washington is the world Capital of democracy, but its residents exist in a "twilight zone" as far as citizenship is concerned. He said Washington, as far as he knew, is the only great city in the democratic world whose people do not have the right of suffrage.

He outlined the main features of the council-manager form of government proposed by the bill, and emphasized that it would retain for Congress and the President their present basic powers over District legislation.

The bill would give Washington a representative 11-member home rule city council in place of the present 3-member board of District Commissioners. Nine of the councilmen would be elected at large by qualified District residents. Two would be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

A manager selected by the council would take over executive direction of the 12 major city departments into which most city agencies would be grouped. An elected school board would run the public school system largely as the present appointed board does now.

Congress and the President would retain control over city lawmaking and this could be exercised in two ways, (1) they could make laws for the District as now; (2) legislation other than city ordinances approved by the council would have to clear both Congress and the President. A council bill would go to Congress. It would take a resolution of both Houses to veto it. If not vetoed in 45 days that way, it would go to the President. Unless he disapproved within 10 days, it would then become law.

2 Gas Firms Oppose Rate Probe Plea

Washington Gas Light Co. and Potomac Gas Co. yesterday asked the Federal Power Commission to dismiss Arlington County's request for an investigation of rates charged by the Washington company for natural gas delivered to Rosslyn Gas Co.

Both Rosslyn and Potomac are subsidiaries of Washington Gas Light.

The Arlington County Board had claimed that Washington Gas Light buys gas at 33 cents per thousand cubic feet, transports it over Potomac's 18-mile line and resells it to Rosslyn at 53 cents.

The Arlington complaint called this rate "unjust, unreasonable and unduly discriminatory" against Arlington consumers and asked FPC to fix a "just and reasonable" rate for sale of gas by Washington Gas Light to Rosslyn.

In their answer, the Washington and Potomac companies said the transportation system described has been used on a limited number of occasions only, and that the same rate applied regardless of the source of delivery.

The two companies also said the rate is established on a basis of 4.7 cents per therm, which is 51.7 cents per 1000 cubic feet for gas containing 1100 BTU per cubic foot, and that the prevailing rate is "just, reasonable and nondiscriminatory."

DeCoursey To Command School Here

Col. Elbert DeCoursey has been named Commandant of the Army Medical Department Research and Graduate School, Army Medical Center, here, it was announced yesterday.

Col. DeCoursey

The new commandant, well known in Washington medical circles, succeeds Col. Rufus L. Holt, who held the position since February, 1946. Colonel Holt will assume command next month of the Central Laboratory for the European Theater of Operations, at Heidelberg, Germany.

Colonel DeCoursey has headed the laboratory service of Brooke General Hospital, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., for two years, and was a consultant in biology and medicine last year for the Atomic Energy Commission.

During his career, he served as assistant director of the Army Institute of Pathology here, 1935-39, when he also lectured in opthalmic pathology at George Washington University.

Longer Tavern Hours Opposed By ABC Board

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has informed the Commissioners it is opposed to extending present tavern hours or placing a limitation on the number of licenses for restaurants, hotels and taverns.

The three-man board made the comments in a report on proposals of the Restaurant Beverage Association of Washington to the Commissioners last month.

The board declared that a proposed staggered system of licensing on-sale establishments for late hours would "not be in the public interest" since it would extend legal hours of sale.

A second proposal for easing the responsibility of licensees in The limitation on licenses would "serve to preclude the licensing of a new hotel or restaurant of first class character, against which licensing there could have been no objection," the board wrote.

The board divided in its comments on a proposal for permitting serving of beverages stronger than beer and light wines at bars. Two opposed this as "a step toward return of the saloon," while James Moran, the third member, approved it as long as such service was limited to "bona fide lunch counters."

Grand Jury DrawsBlank In Court Clerk Probe

Baltimore, May 27 (AP).—A grand jury reported today after a week's study it had no charges to return against Wilford L. Carter, clerk of the criminal court.

The grand jury investigation of Carter was started after judges of the supreme bench asked the clerk to resign. Carter refused. The judges then referred the matter to the State's attorney for whatever action "deemed appropriate."

Snead, Worsham Lead Way Into PGA's 3d Round

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

BOSTON, MAY 27.—Gene Tunney, apparently dismembering a fellow named Jack Dempsey who had him on the floor in Chicago, told a Boston press conference, "Harry Greb was the fastest and toughest to lick of all the fighters I ever faced." Tunney, made an honorary commissioner of the Boston Police Department, wondered out loud why Boston previously "had always been so offish to me, the only Irishman to get to the top of the heavyweights in a long time" . . . Manager Joe Kuhel of the Nats would have no relief pitching problems, it appears, if they played the Cleveland Indians 154 games a year. All five Washington pitchers who have faced and beaten the Indians have gone the full route. Mickey Haefner: "Larry Doby of the Indians has the fastest breaking pair of wrists of any hitter I ever faced, including Ted Williams."

POVICH

Newest fishing gadget on the market is a dehydrated bait that puffs up on striking the water as well as slowly bleeding into the water to lure fish from a long distance. It has been successful in luring catfish, bullheads, trout, sunfish and others that like blood.

THE PGA put in its rules that an applicant for membership must serve five years apprenticeship, after Ralph Guldahl suddenly left the amateurs to become a pro 14 years ago. Guldahl did it very simply. Playing as an amateur in a Texas tournament, he was told he couldn't accept the $100 prize money his score rated, so he said, "I'm turning pro, so give me the check. I need it more than my amateur standing." Boston College, that citadel of Catholic training, is a shining example of interfaith understanding. Art Spinney, captain-elect of its football team, is an Episcopalian.

Ralph King is a colored lad. Mal Coven, track team manager, and the two high-scoring basketball stars, Dan Bricker and Mort Stagoff, are of the Jewish faith. Cleveland's baseball writing press is alarmed not as much by the frayed condition of Lou Boudreau's pitching staff, but by glaring evidence that Boudreau, himself, has slowed up badly at shortstop. Always troubled by weak ankles, Boudreau was bypassed by hits in Griffith Stadium that he would have easily come up with last season.

GEORGE MYATT is reportedly putting in his last year as manager of the Nats' Chattanooga farm, and will be called to the Washington club as coach, with the Chattanooga managerial post going to Sammy West, now a partner of Chicago Bear Halfback Bobby Layne, in a Lubbock, Tex., sporting goods business. Chattanooga won its finest victory the other night, beating Birmingham, 13-11, after trailing 11-2. Mike Palm, Georgetown's backfield coach last year, is now the prospering owner of a new restaurant in Washington across from the Congressional Library. He is fighting the urge to do some scouting for the pro teams next fall, and prefers to stay friendly with all of the athletes of all teams who are his patrons. Mickey Vernon can inquire what the Indians are beefing about. Despite his mere .245 average, he's still leading the Cleveland club in runs batted in. The Yankees brazenly tried to buy Gus Zernial from the White Sox, an affront to the intelligence of General Manager Frank Lane, who knows he would be hounded out of the Windy City if he even considered such a deal.

TOMMY ARMOUR, former open champion who will play in the National Celebrities Tournament, is famed for the strength of his fingers and has performed the feat of holding three billiard cues horizontally by the small end. Since Detroit's Johnny Groth has cooled off, Roy Sievers of the Browns and Gus Zernial of the White Sox are being hailed as the prize rookies of the year. How did the Cleveland Indians get away with optioning their rookie outfielder, Louis Marquez, to Portland of the Coast League? They already have a working agreement with San Diego in the same circuit, and under baseball laws cannot be represented by players on two clubs in the same league. Surprising that Commissioner Chandler hasn't called the deal off. The turf writers who are dismissing Olympia, the pre-Derby favorite, as a mere sprinter who is no threat at more than a mile, have short memories. Coaltown, the sensational router of this year, didn't like it, either, at more than a mile when he was a 3-year-old in 1948.

Yanks Beat Macks 3-0; Henrich, Berra Homer

New York, May 27 (AP).—Home runs by Tommy Henrich and Yogi Berra shepherded the New York Yankees to a 3-0 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics tonight. Unbeaten Eddie Lopat stopped the A's on six safeties to gain his fifth victory.

A crowd of 50,581 saw Henrich and Berra knock two of Joe Coleman's offerings out of the park to provide all the Bombers' runs as they stretched their league-lead over the runner-up Mackmen to 4½ games.

Cleveland Wins, 4-0, Over Chisox

Cleveland, May 27 (AP).—With 38-year-old Al Benton twirling six-hit ball, the Cleveland Indians came to life tonight and beat the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 0, before a "reopening day" crowd of 33,235.

The seventh place world champs, losers of 10 of their last 12 games, jumped on Lefty Bill Wight in the third and seventh innings, getting two runs in each. Benton allowed the Sox only widely spaced singles.

George McQuinn Shifts Interest To Auto Racing

George McQuinn, former first baseman with the St. Louis Browns, Philadelphia A's and New York Yankees, last night announced that he has acquired a half interest in the No. 6 Mercury roadster racer driven by a fellow Arlingtonian, Carl Anderson and formerly owned completely by Johnny Divers.

"Anderson used to pitch on the sandlot baseball team on which my brother, Kenny, played third," McQuinn said. Kenny McQuinn was killed in action during World War II.

"Divers will continue to handle the business end, but I'll attend some of the races and have a lot of fun while keeping my hand in sports. This looks like a good investment," said McQuinn.

Anderson is currently the leading point scorer in the Eastern Roadster Racing Club and will appear on the two-day holiday program at Hybla Valley Speedway, Sunday and Monday.

W.-L. Nine Gains Virginia Final, 5-0

Portsmouth, Va., May 27.—Washington-Lee High of Arlington shut out Woodrow Wilson of Portsmouth, 5-0, here tonight and advanced to the finals of the Virginia baseball championship tournament.

W.-L. faces Roanoke High at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Roanoke defeated John Marshall of Richmond, 3-2, here today. Stan Monroe and Bruce Hillenbrand shared the starring role for W.L. Monroe pitched a clever four-hitter, striking out 14. Hillenbrand hit a single and homer, the latter traveling over the 320-foot fence with plenty to spare.

Clarence Rakow (nearest camera) of Central led until this last hurdle but couldn't stave off Ward, who also won the low hurdle final and ran No. 1 on the winning mile relay team. 5600 Watch Successful Harness Debut

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Rosecroft Raceway, after being battered by rains for the past week, put on the second most successful opener in harness history last night.

The Oxon Hill track had a mutuel handle of $164,501. That was just short of the $167,096 wagared at Laurel Raceway last summer. And that latter figure more than doubled the handle at the opening of any night half-mile track.

Official net paid attendance was 5660.

Mr. Peter Mite, second longest shot in the field, won a stirring victory in the Innovation, $1000 feature trotting event. Paying $31.80, the 8-year-old gelding won by three-quarters of a length.

Driver Joe Hylan, scoring a double for the night, had to hold off the sensational charge of Belina Hanover. Tom Lewis' 7-year-old mare came from dead last to take the place spot from Mont in a photo. Seattle Dean, even-money favorite, was last after showing early speed.

Mr. Peter Mite was a bit of a sleeper. He raced last year as a pacer and was making his first start of the season on the trot. The versatile gelding has alternated the gaits all his racing life.

Longshot of the night was Dynamite, $33.80 winner of the fourth event. The 11-year-old gelding races as if powered by same. Dynamite held a 10-length lead at one point and trotted home four lengths to the good.

First daily double in Rosecroft history was a substantial $60.40. Virginia and Maryland drivers formed the lucky 7-7 winning combination.

Columbus Hanover, driven by Willie Webb, Kilmarnock, Va., made the opening official when he sped home in the first race to the tune of a $13.40 payoff.

Then Joe Eyler, Thurmont, Md., driver who was exceedingly popular at Laurel last year, got Crusder Chief home in front in the second race at $10.40. Both winners had to come from behind in the stretch.

Duncan Wins Midget Feature

Len Duncan, Brooklyn, N. Y. midget car driver, scored his second straight grand sweep when he won his qualifying heat, semi-final and feature event last night at Lanham Speedway, before a crowd of 3500.

Mike Joseph, with his ribs still bandaged from an accident about a month ago, was second and Bill Schindler, making his first postwar appearance, was third.

Washington-Lee High Crew Gains National 8-Oar Finals

Special to The Post

Ecorse, Mich., May 27.—The brand-new rowing team of Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, Va., showed its class here today as it qualified with ease for the National Senior Scholastic 8-Oar championship on the Detroit River tomorrow.

Washington-Lee, in competition on a last-minute $1000 appropriation from its school board, finished second to LaFayette High, of Buffalo, by three-quarters of a length in the third heat of qualifying races. Except for a shortening of the course the Little Generals might have won.

Because of a 4.7 miles current the Trenton channel course was

Coan Benched As Nats Open Bosox Series

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, May 27.—Gil Coan has been committed to the Nats' bench for a spell by Manager Joe Kuhel who did the merciful thing—before the young outfielder's frustration set in too deeply, with long-range effects.

Kuhel had time to talk of Coan's case when constant rains in Boston washed out tonight's scheduled contest with the Red Sox. The Nats lost no ground in the league standings, but their stockholders took a beating what with a crowd of 30,000 anticipated under the lights.

"I took Coan out of there more for his own good than for the team's," said Kuhel. "He wasn't hurting us as much as he was himself. I don't want him to have any doubts that he is not a big leaguer. He was beginning to get down."

Coan's batting average has sagged below the .25 mark since the Nats returned from their Western trip, and before he was benched he was a badly confused man at the plate.

It was in contract to his splurge at the start of the season, and with each succeeding failure, Coan appeared more helpless, swinging at bad pitches, taking good ones with his bat on his shoulder.

Meanwhile the Nats manager is going along with Ed Stewart, Clyde Vollmer and Buddy Lewis as his outfielders.

Today's postponement didn't change Kuhel's pitching plans with respect to Ray Scarborough, who'll still face the Red Sox tomorrow in the series opener. He is drawing handsome Jack Kramer as his opponent.

In short—Originally Kuhel planned to pitch Scarborough, Calvert and Masterson in the three-game series here. It has been curtailed to two games, and Masterson will be scratched. Sid Hudson and Joe Haynes are being groomed for the Decoration Day double-header with the Yankees in Washington. Whether the pitching is left or right in Boston, Kuhel may play Al Kozar at second base, hopeful that Kozar will bump some hits against or over the short left field wall. The Nats are in higher esteem in Boston on this trip than when they were last here, as losers of six in a row. The Red Sox have won 8 of their last 10 and are higher in favor, too. The booing of Ted Williams in Boston has commenced anew

Sammy Faces Douglas and Lew Takes On Palmer

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., May 27.—Forty-eight golfers went down swinging in the National PGA Championship today, but not one favorite struck out.

The Sneads, Mangrums, Worshams, Ferriers and Demarets were still in the thick of things after two rounds of match play reduced the cast from 64 to 16, of which only eight will be left after tomorrow's 36-hole third round.

Sammy Snead, the sentimental and perhaps logical favorite to tack on this championship to his recently acquired Masters crown, marched on with victories over Jackie Burke, jr., of Houston, in the morning, and Henry Ransom, Illinois veteran, after lunch.

Snead, idol of the galleries, brushed off Burke, son of the famous old pro of the Hagen-Jones-Diegel era, by 3 and 2 and made Ransom his second victim by a 3-and-1 count.

Snead Meets Douglas

Tomorrow the smooth-swinging Slammin' Sammy meets the challenge of Dave Douglas, Young Wilmington, Del., pro who beat Pete Cooper and Mike Demassey.

Although he had a breeze today against one Stan Staszowski, of Torrington, Conn., and George Schneiter, Lew Worsham runs head-on into a tartar tomorrow in Johnny Palmer, the Badin, N. C., upstart. While Worsham, who lost only one hole all day, was giving the chill to Staszowski by 6 and 5 and to Schneiter by 5 and 4, Palmer disposed of Mike Turnesa, PGA finalist last year, 1 up on the twentieth hole for his morning victory. Palmer had it much easier in the afternoon, routing Cincinnati's Clay Gaddie, 8 and 6.

Playing the best golf of the day—six under par—1946 Open Champion Mangrum won the right to meet Herman Barron by expelling two former PGA champs during his tour of duty. His first victim was veteran Denny Shute, two-time pretitlist, who bowed out 6 and 5. After a quick lunch, Mangrum excused Bob Hamilton, the 1944 pro king who's playing pro out of Prince Georges Country Club.

Demaret Extended to Win

Colorful Jimmy Demaret, acknowledged sartorial champ of the links, had a hertic afternoon, but survived. Chubby Harold Oatman of Norfolk, Va., carried Demaret to the 18th green before losing in the morning. Jimmy took care of George Fazio, Conshohocken, Pa., in the afternoon, but not until the 17th green. Jim Ferier, a pitch and putt expert for whom this course seems to be perfect, knocked off unknown Andy Lapola handily first and then threw a six and five defeat into Skip Alexander, winner of the 1948 National Capital Open. The only minor upset of the day was at the expense of Porky Oliver, powerized delegate from Wilmington, Del. Oliver bowed to Frank Moore, of Overland, Mo., brother of the Cardinals, Terry Moore, 1 up after 19 holes.

In addition to Oliver, 10 other "name" pay-for-play golfers fell by the wayside, but none could be considered an upset of major proportions.

This list included Gene Sarazen, three-time former champ who found his 47 years too much against younger Henry Williams,

Western Out

Eastern, Wilson Win In Playoffs

By Bill Gilbert

Eastern romped over Tech, 17-2, and Woodrow Wilson came up with two runs in the seventh inning to win over Western, 7-5, in Interhigh playoff games yesterday.

As a result of its loss, Western was eliminated and Wilson meets Tech Tuesday at Griffith Stadium with the loser dropping out and the winner meeting Eastern in the finals.

Eastern scored four times in the second and six more in the fourth in romping over Tech. Jim O'Donnell went all the way, allowing only four hits. Eastern sent 52 men to bat during the game.

Don Hall doubled with two out and nobody on and Chet Cooper drove him home to break a 5-5 deadlock and give the Tigers their win. Leo Speros then singled, scoring Cooper, who went to second on the throw to get Hali.

Willie Plays McCready for Title Today

Portamarnock, Ireland, May 27 (AP).—Willie Turnesa, stout-hearted little battler from Elmsford, N. Y., fought through to victory in two blistering matches today to reach the final of the British amateur golf championship as Defending Champion Frank Stranahan bowed out.

Tomorrow the American amateur king will attempt to bring off the classic "double" of amateur golf when he engages Sam McCready, the 35-year-old Irish-born sharpshooter who ousted Stranahan, in a 36-hole struggle.

Turnesas Extended to Win

The youngest of the famous golfing Turnesas is the first player to reach the American and British amateur finals four times since Lawson Little turned the trick in 1934-35. Willie won the British Crown two years ago at Carnoustie.

Scrambling out of the rough most of the way, Turnesa was carried to the nineteenth hole before he disposed of Mick Power of County Cork in his quarter-final match this morning. Ernest Millward, a 27-year-old Englishman, took him to the eighteenth green in the afternoon before losing 1 up.

His opponent tomorrow, McCready, proved himself a sturdy competitor as he knocked out Stranahan, 4 and 3, in the quarterfinal and went on to subdue Ken Thom, the '46 English champion, on the twer tieth green in the afternoon. He was two under par when he closed Thom out with a birdie on the second extra hole.

Play In High, Cold Wind

McCready, a former fighter pilot in the RAF, said he yearned to play on the British Walker team against the United States in August, and that he figured the best way to make the team was to beat Stranahan. He caught the "strong boy" on an off-day, got him down and never let him up.

A high, cold wind off the Irish Sea caused Stranahan to wear a stocking cap down over his ears. His drives wandered far and wide, he missed several short putts, and he was a miserable former champion as he trudged off the fifteenth tee to be consoled by his father, Robert Stranahan.

Stranahan became steadily more angry with himself as he failed to match McCready's play, and after he missed a short putt to lose the twelfth hole he jerked the flag pole out of the hole and slammed it onto the green.

His eyes were misty as he watched his second putt on the final hole curl away from the cup. He stared at the ball for a few seconds, congratulated his victorious foe, and walked away arm in arm with his father.

Navy Plays Army Lacrosse

Annapolis, Md., May 27 (AP).—Lacrosse frenzy swept Annapolis tonight on the eve of an Army-Navy game which highlights a two-front campaign winding up the spring sports program at the service academies.

Unbeaten Navy, riding high after 10 straight victories, was established as the favorite to beat Army and stake a claim to the mythical college lacrosse title.

The Midshipmen's heavy firepower is concentrated in Attackman Lee Chambers, 21-year-old Baltimorean. Chambers has averaged almost three goals a game in compiling a total of 12 over four years. He has never been held scoreless.

Going into the final game of his career, Lee has already scored 37 goals to break his own Navy record of 3 in one season.

Navy will be seeking at least a tie with defending champion Johns Hopkins for the National college lacrosse title. Hopkins has finished its season with eight straight wins.

The lacrosse game features a six-sport program. Army-Navy baseball, track and golf contests will be held at West Point. Tennis and sailing events will be staged at Annapolis.

Navy's only loss of 1949 was a 10-4 exhibition game defeat at the hands of the Mount Washington club. Army has won five, lost two, and held Mount Washington to a 6-6 tie.

Mrs. Maksim's Low Net 78 Wins Manor Duffer Cup

Mrs. George Maksim of Manor Country Club, won the Duffers Cup yesterday in the first event sponsored by the Women's District Golf Association for higher handicapped players. Her score of 102 minus a 24 handicap gave her a low net of 78.

Mrs. H. M. Nelson of Washington with 100 was the low gross winner. Second low net went to Mrs. J. J. McCarthy of Indian Spring, with 106—26—80.

The third place award was won by Mrs. Harry Kipp, also of Indian Spring with 106—26—80. A tie for fourth place between Mrs. H. C. Fisher and Mrs. Verne Wilson, both of Columbia, necessitated a "sudden death" playoff. Mrs. Fisher was the winner, retaining fourth place, while Mrs. Wilson dropped down to the fifth for the last prize.

Mrs. Northwood Takes Blind Bogey Honors

The women's day blind bogey tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club yesterday was won by Mrs. Robert Northwood with a 102—28—74. There was a tie for second between Mrs. William Parsons, 94—11—83, and Mrs. Vern McCaul, 114—31—83.

Among the nine-hole players, Mrs. Eric King and Mrs. E. P. Schrup tied with 41 and Mrs. George Calver and Mrs. Jack Schuck had 43s.

Grays Sign 3 New Players, Meet Richmond Sunday

Three new players were signed yesterday by Washington's Homestead Grays who return to Griffith Stadium Sunday afternoon for a doubleheader with the Richmond Giants.

The trio includes two outfielders, Lester Weatherspoon, formerly of the Indianapolis Clowns, Lester Jackson, of Iberia, La., and a catcher, George McKnight of New York City. Weatherspoon and Jackson will be in the lineup in the Sabbath contests.

Weatherspoon is a 240-pound, 6-foot-3 flychaser who is rated a good hitter, and Jackson, who tips 210 pounds, is noted for his defensive play. McKnight, 24, will serve as substitute for Luther Clifford, the No. 1 backstop, replacing Nap Napier, who was released earlier this week.

Rita Stars in Marriage Scene Of Her Romance With Prince

lem, said the marriage is "both permissible and correct under Moslew law.")

Rita and Aly said "yes" shortly before noon in the town hall of nearby Vallauris.

Paul Derigion, Communist mayor of the village, officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Obviously impressed by it all, he referred to the bride as "your highness" and wished the couple happiness. He also got in a plug for Vallauris' ceramics and pottery industry.

The actress, radiant in a light blue silk crepe dress and broad picture hat wound with tulle of the same delicate color, appeared just a little nervous. Her lips trembled at times, and she tugged at her handkerchief. But she went through it like a seasoned trouper.

When the mayor came to the part of the ceremony where he asked if each agreed to all of the conditions, both Rita and Aly replied "Oui, oui." One "oui" is enough, but the double response is a standard reply by enthusiastic Frenchmen.

Then a reception centering about the swimming pool was held at Aly's Chateau de l'Horizon.

Rita was a picture of happiness. Aly bubbled like the champagne his guests were drinking.

Some of them also were drinking a cocktail, called Ritaly, invented for the occasion. It is a zippy mystery containing vermouth and chartreuse.

Demurely Rita tried to lose herself in the throng at the reception. But groups formed about her constantly, and over and over she answered the same questions.

Yes, she is very happy.

Yes, there will be a Moslem religious service, probably in a few days in Paris.

Will Return to Make Movies

Yes, she will return to the United States to make more movies, but probably not before the end of the year.

The honeymoon?

Well, Rita giggled, she and the prince are keeping it a little secret but it will involve some traveling. Aly chimed in to say that part of it may be in Britain and that he hoped to attend the English Derby at Epsom Downs June 4. "I'm sure my wife will come with me," he observed, and Rita smiled.

According to the official town record of the marriage, Rita is 30 years of age and Aly is 37.

It was her third marriage and his second. The Hollywood star previously was married to Edward Judson, a Texas oil man, and Orson Welles, American actor-producer. Aly formerly was married to Joan Yarde-Buller, a British heiress.

Rita has been a Roman Catholic. Her real name is Margarita Carmen Cansino. That was the way the actress was listed on the marriage record. She is of Spanish-Irish extraction.

Aly derives his title of prince from the fact that he is heir apparent to the leadership of the Ismaili sect of Moslems. He is of Italian-Persian extraction.

Rita will be known formally as "Rita Hayworth, Princess Aly Khan," according to best available information.

There is no rule about it, since the princely title usually given her bridegroom is only a matter of courtesy. It will be the practice to refer to her as "Princess Aly Khan," and not as Princess Rita.

The Aga Khan, father of the bridegroom and head of the Ismaili Moslems, beamed broadly and was manifestly content with both the ceremony and the reception later. Leaning on his cane, the fabulously wealthy Aga watched the proceedings intently through his thick spectacles.

At the Chateau de l'Horizon there was an interlude for photographers—movie and still. The movie cameramen wanted action.

"I know what you want all right—a passionate love scene," said Aly. "But I'm afraid I'm not a competent actor. The acting talent is on the other side of the family."

So the bride and groom strolled along the edge of the pool, probably not providing as much action as the cameramen wanted, but giving an authentic impression of a couple in love. The Aga beamed, looking like a man who had just won the Derby (his horses have won it four times).

10-Month Courtship

The marriage of Rita and Aly climaxed a 10-month courtship conducted on something approaching a global scale. They met at a party on the French Riviera last summer. They visited Spain, the United States, Mexico, Cuba, Ireland, England and Switzerland.

Then an international storm developed. A London newspaper denounced Rita as "an insult to decent women." The motion picture chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of America demanded a boycott of Rita's pictures.

But the couple seemingly ignored the hullabaloo. Rita met Aly's father. The Aga was reported charmed. He approved the marriage.

The French government insisted that the wedding be performed in the Vallauris town hall. One hundred and twenty police were called in from Nice to prevent any disturbance from marring the wedding. They had little to do. The 500 villagers and others who lined the narrow road from the chateau confined themselves to friendly applause and some cheering.

After what seemed to be a jittery moment on her arrival at the hall, Rita calmed down as the mayor welcomed her effusively. She posed for photographers with him and waved to the crowd. The villagers obviously approved of her.

The AGA, arriving a moment later, stood at the top of the steps, first waving and then throwing kisses. The bridegroom, wearing striped trousers and a double-breasted black jacket, bounded up the steps so quickly that no one recognized him but the Indian guests.

Inside the hall were 60 invited guests, including seven princes and four princesses; 75 reporters and photographers and a few residents of the village. Al Lewis of The Washington Post was among the reporters attending.

The simple ceremony was over eight minutes after Rita and Aly arrived. The wedding bands they put on were of white gold. Then Mayor Derigon made a little speech wishing them happiness.

The actress entered the hall carrying orange blossoms. The mayor presented her a bouquet of white roses. After the ceremony village girls gave her a bunch of red roses. She left carrying all three.

Rita was the simply dressed for the ceremony. The multitude of tiny pleats in her calf-length pale blue crepe dress fluttered gracefully as she walked up and down the steps of the town hall.

The bodice of the dress was tightly fitted, as were the long sleeves. The neckline was modestly cut in the shape of a V. Her large picture hat, pinned to the back of her head, revealed that her auburn hair was pulled behind her ears and curled to shoulder length.

The only jewels she wore were small pearl earrings. She also wore wrist length black suede gloves and black suede shoes with very high, slender heels.

Added splashes of color were provided by the guests, some of whom were attired in native Indian costumes. One had on a golden turban. The Indian women wore saris of delicately shaded blue, lavender and green.

Clerk's Talk On D. C. Golf Costs Job

Dismissal of an Interior Department file clerk has been recommended for showing a reporter department files on the S. G. Leoffler Co., whose operation of public golf courses here is under congressional scrutiny.

A. E. Demaray, associate director of the Interior Department's National Parks Service, said yesterday that the clerk had been placed on leave and his dismissal recommended to the personnel director for showing the files to Jack Walsh, Washington Post sports writer.

The clerk has been identified as Cleo Michael, 38, of 2610 E st. ne. Michael has been an employe of the department since 1941 and worked in the National Parks Service office for the past two years.

The Leoffler Co.'s operation of public golf courses as concessionaire is under investigation by the House Public Lands Subcommittee. The next hearing is scheduled for 10 a. m. June 7, when an audit report prepared by the Interior Department is expected to be taken up.

Leoffler's contract with the Interior Department expired January 1, and he has since been operating the courses without a contract pending outcome of the investigation.

1300 WAA Employes To Get 30-Day Layoff Notices on Tuesday

Thirteen hundred War Assets Administration employes will be given 30-day lay-off notices next Tuesday. Two hundred are at headquarters in this city.

As of June 30, WAA will be down to 2550 people of whom 450 will be here. On that date, too, its legal life will expire and the agency will have to go out of business unless Congress acts in the meantime to continue it is an independent agency or to transfer it to some other agency.

A bill is before Congress to transfer WAA to the Federal Works Agency. Another would make it a bureau within the proposed new general service agency. At its peak, WAA had 60,000 employes.

TRAVEL BILL: The Senate Expenditures Committee yesterday stamped an okay on the employe travel measure. Its bill differs only in minor respects from the measure approved several weeks ago in the House by a voice vote.

The two big features are identical—an increase in the travel allowance from $6 to a maximum of $9 a day, and a boost from 5 to 7 cents a mile for private car use on official business.

COMPENSATION BILL: The House Labor Committee has reported out the Lesinski bill to increase the compensation to Federal workers who are disabled on the job and to the families of employes who are killed in line of duty. The meritorious measure has the full support of the Administration. It would increase compensation up to a maximum of 75 per cent of salary. Also, it would pay a flat sum based on salary to employes who suffered loss of limbs and eyes back to 1940.

SUSPENSION. The Davis subcommittee of the House Civil Service Committee yesterday approved the bill to give agency heads the right to suspend employes up to 30 days under certain conditions. Workers who endanger the lives and safety of their coworkers and who destroy public property could be suspended on the spot.

Within two days after suspension the employes would have to be given letters of written charges. Those who were later cleared would be paid for the time lost.

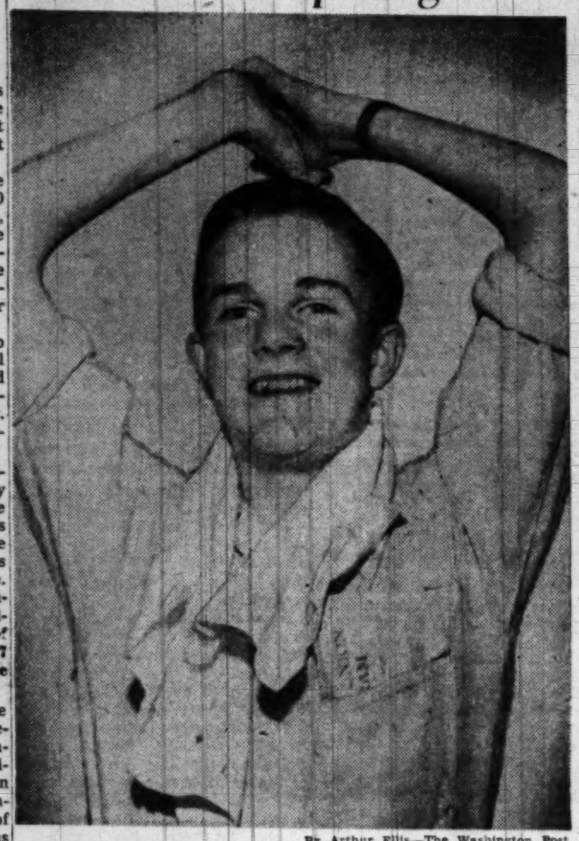
UNION BILL: The so-called "little Wagner Act" for Federal worker unions also was approved and made an amendment to the suspension bill. This measure would compel Federal officials to deal with union leaders. It is of such wide interest that it's being carried in full as follows:

"The right of officers or representatives of organizations to present grievances in behalf of their members without restraint, coercion, interference, intimidation or reprisal is recognized and any violation of such right on the part of an administrative official shall be cause for suspension or removal or such other punitive action as the head of the department or agency may deem advisable.

"Administrative officers, at the request of officers or representatives of the employes organizations, either in person or through duly designated representatives shall confer on matters of policy affecting working conditions, safety, in-service training, labor-management cooperation, methods of adjusting grievances, appeals, granting of leave, promotions, demotions, rates of pay and reductions of force, and shall recognize the right of such officers or representatives to solicit membership, collect fees or dues, or carry on any lawful activity, without intimidation, coercion, interference, or reprisal."

The union bill of rights was introduced by Representative Rhodes (D., Pa.) who was a union printer and an AFL official before he was elected to Congress.

Ohio Boy, Finalist Last Year, Wins National Spelling Title



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

THE "C-H-A-M-P-I-O-N"—Spelled, K-i-m C-a-l-v-i-n

Kipling-named Kim Calvin, a boy with a true champion's heart, yesterday became the Nation's No. 1 schoolboy speller at the twenty-second National Spelling Bee here.

Defeated in last year's contest, finishing in twelfth place, Kim, 13, took it on the chin and went back to his home in Canton, Ohio, to do something about it.

Every day for a year he put in a rigorous session of spelling words under the coaching of his mother, a former schoolteacher.

Especially they concentrated on musical terms because the word that knocked Kim out of the running last year was "obbligato."

This foresight was almost uncanny. For the word on which Kim eliminated his last competitor yesterday was another musical term "dulcimer"—a stringed instrument, Webster's says.

Kim makes all A's except in one subject. This subject is—music.

James Shea of Brooklyn, N. Y., 13, and an eighth grader like Kim, spelled the word "dolcimer" but Kim got it right then clinched his title by correctly spelling "onerous."

James fainted a few minutes after the grueling, 58-round contest in the National Press auditorium. Quickly revived, he was taken off the stage, which had become overheated from spotlights.

First thing Kim did after his victory was to phone his mother who stayed home to nurse his sister. He gets a trip to New York and $500.

In the contest, sponsored by the Scripps-Howard and other newspapers, Washington's entrant finished fourteenth. He's Michael Milton, 11, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Milton of Beach Bank rd., Forest Glen.

Michael lost out on the word "arboreal." He used an "i" instead of an "e."

Girl, 4, Moves Judge to Give Leniency, Reunite Parents

The dramatic appearance of his 4-year-old daughter won leniency for a defendant—her father—in Municipal Court yesterday.

James E. Freeman, 43, unemployed steamfitter, was before Judge Armond W. Scott charged with assault.

It was charged that he struck his wife with a salt shaker Tuesday during an argument in their home at 735 8th st. se.

"I had been looking hard for work," Freeman was saying on the witness stand, "and I came home tired. My wife started arguing . . ."

At this point, a child's cry was heard in the courtroom. "Daddy, daddy, daddy," screamed a small, thin voice. Then Freeman's daughter, Peggy, came running down the aisle to the witness stand.

A court attendant made a move as though to stop her, but Judge Scott intervened. "Let her come up here," he said.

The child settled in the defendant's lap and he continued his testimony.

"Well, one word led to another. She gave me a shove. Then she threw a pot at me. And I threw a salt shaker at her."

Freeman admitted that he drank several beers before returning home.

"It seems to me," said Judge Scott, "that a lovely child like that would be a compelling force to help you make good. Look at the devotion of that child. The next time you want a drink, think of that child's devotion. I'm not going to impose a penalty. I'm going to take your personal bond."

Freeman, his wife and Peggy walked arm in arm from the courtroom.

Suspect Jail Lost Put on Probation

Carolinian, Detained By Series of Errors, Is Given Credit for Time He Served

Scott W. Fuller, 24, who was imprisoned in District Jail for four months on a larceny charge before being indicted, yesterday was given a suspended sentence of 4 to 12 months and placed on probation for 2 years.

The sentence was pronounced by Judge Edward A. Tamm in District Court. Tamm remarked that he was taking into consideration the time Fuller had already spent in jail.

Fuller had been confined through a series of clerical errors. He was charged with theft of $120 from a gas station owner here.

Two men convicted of gaming charges were given suspended sentences and a third drew a four-months-to-one-year jail term.

Those who were given 4-to-12-month suspended sentences by Judge Richmond B. Keech were William H. Scott, 26, of 1815 Good Hope rd. se., convicted of setting up a gaming table for horse race bets, and George K. McKenzie, 30, of 3914 Benning rd. ne., promoting a lottery. Both were placed on probation for one year.

Sentenced to serve four months to one year by Federal Judge Edward M. Curran was Roy H. Sansbury, 50, of 2325 Pennsylvania ave. se. Sansbury was convicted of promoting a lottery.

Eddie P. S. Brady, 50, of 1812 Providence st. ne., was sentenced to serve six months to two years on a charge of arson in attempting to set fire to his home.

Orville Kerbur, 44, of 668 B st. se., was sentenced to serve eight months to two years for receiving stolen property.

Peyton Davis, 28, of 706 7th st. ne., was sentenced to serve two to six years for manslaughter in the traffic death of John A. Butler, 51, of 6221 Clay st. ne., last February.

Cop Marks Birthday by Fire Rescue

Private John G. Myers of the 13th Precinct celebrated his thirty-second birthday early yesterday by carrying an unconscious woman to safety from a flaming room at 2341 18th st. nw.

Pvt. Myers

Myers rescued Mrs. Kathryn Price, a 27-year-old waitress, after he saw smoke curling from her rooming house window at 4 a. m. He smashed a plate-glass door, forced open the door of her room, and crawled through dense smoke to her bedside.

After he had carried her to safety, he roused the other occupants of the building. Police said the fire apparently started from a cigarette dropped in Mrs. Price room. No one was injured.

Doctors to Blame if Medicine Is Socialized, Mrs. Meyer Declares at Convention Here

The Washington Post

Organized medicine has no one to blame but itself if the American people "eventually accept" compulsory health insurance, District physicians were told here last night.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, outspoken critic of compulsory health insurance, blamed present legislative measures on the American Medical Association, which has "spent its energies fighting every attempt at cooperative action made by the people themselves."

She spoke at annual meeting of of the section on general practice, District Medical Society, at the society's headquarters, 1718 M st. nw. At the same meeting, nine high school students were honored and awarded cash prizes for essays in the section's contest on "The Family Doctor."

The winners included:

Nancy R. Fisher, Sidwell Friends School, first award, $100; Diane Ruth Carroll, Georgetown Visitation Convent, second award, $75; Nancy Helena Dahl, Western High School, third award, $50.

Honorable mention awards of $20 pen and pencil sets were presented to Roberta Patton, St. Anthony High School; Mary Lucretia Detwiler, St. Cecilia's High School; Margie Sue Hauser, Immaculate Conception Academy; James Raymond Hall, St. Paul's Academy; Florence M. Cawthorne, Dunbar High School, and Joan Louise Ruth, Eastern High School.

Mrs. Meyer, wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post, predicted that Congress would not act this year on compulsory health insurance measures, and therefore organized medicine would have a "breathing spell" during which it could change its ways.

"The point I want to make tonight," she declared, "is that we will eventually accept compulsory health insurance in the United States, unless medical leadership works out a new, constructive and truly democratic plan for cooperative endeavor with the local, State and Federal governments for the dissemination of medical care and health protection."

Speaking of the wartime strides in new medicines, medicinal skills and new concepts of health protection, she said: "The problem of putting these magnificent medical achievements at the disposal of people as a whole still confronts us.

"It has not even been considered by the doctors on a comprehensive scale, largely because the American Medical Association, instead of taking the lead in thinking through this fundamental difficulty, has spent its energies fighting every attempt at cooperative action made by the people themselves."

Mrs. Meyer praised the operation and success of the Maryland Health Plan in integrating doctors, health departments, hospitals and medical schools into a program for the care of the indigent and medically indigent.

She urged the physicians to plan at once for a District health program, integrating the voluntary hospitals and public health and welfare department programs with "a well organized plan for medical care."

"You have the chance of a lifetime to give this city and the Nation a demonstration of the progress our civilization can make when we break down the gap between our scientific knowledge and our social inefficiency and drift," she declared.

Last night's meeting was preceded by brief outdoor ceremonies marking completion of building front renovations financed by the society's women's auxiliary.

Further Delay Urged on Fire Egress Rules

Three organizations yesterday asked further delays of six months to a year on enforcement of the District's new fire egress code, to permit further study.

John H. Connaughton, president, Federation of Citizens Associations, suggested a one-year delay, terming a previous recommendation by the federation's safety committee for a 90-day moratorium inadequate.

Charles J. Rush, speaking for the Washington Real Estate Board, and Guy Tinner of the Federation of Civic Associations, asked a six-month delay for the same reason.

The recommendations were made at a hearing before the Commissioners, a continuation of an earlier session held on Monday. At that time, several groups counseled delays of three to six months in the enforcement of the regulations, pending since 1944.

Paul J. Miller, president of the Washington Guest House Association, said the rules are "willful confiscation of property without just compensation."

He and other witnesses cited the problems of persons earning a living from operations of rooms in three-story houses. The required changes would force many owners, which include widows, to give up the establishments.

Under present rules, the District Building itself "is one of the worst fire traps in the city," Miller declared. While the audience laughed, he explained that it has all open staircases, while the regulations require they be enclosed. "Smoke could come up those stairways and suffocate the Commissioners and all employes," he said.

Miller said the present rules are not clear in that they do not differentiate between requirements for new and existing structures.

Morris C. Bishop, treasurer, Washington Property Owners Association, recommended the regulations be limited to places of public assembly, which carry the greatest risk of fire disasters. He said the small number of fires in other types of structures indicated the low risk.

Lions' Cruise Raid Is Laid To Tip From Boat Skipper

Boat Line Reports Relief Captain Told Police 'Gamblers' Were to Be Aboard

The mystery cast around the moonlight raid on a Washington Lions Club cruise was lifted somewhat yesterday.

Dodson

Revealed as the leading figure in it all was the salty, silver-haired relief captain of the SS Mount Vernon, Eppa L. Dodson, 65, of 614 G st. sw., and the Potomac River.

Officials of the Wilson Line, which operates the pleasure boat, said yesterday that Dodson was "directly responsible" for the surprise raid Wednesday night by Prince Georges County police.

The little skipper was "acting fully without the knowledge of the company," according to Warren E. Magee, Wilson attorney. Dodson set up the raid personally with county police after he had registered complaints with them that professional gamblers were operating, Magee said.

Dodson Not Present

Dodson was identified as the informant after a two-hour session between States Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie; the Mount Vernon captain, Herbert S. Hall; Wilson Line agent, R. R. Hyman; county police officers and Magee.

Dodson was not present, although he had been asked to attend. He was in command of an excursion yesterday afternoon.

Magee absolved Hall, who was in command of the ship, although he said it had been established that Hall had talked to Detective Richard Pearson, at the time that Dodson reportedly set up the raid. Hall said he answered one of Pearson's questions, but was not aware of his identity.

Dodson, however, has denied it all. And his motive was a remaining mystery.

Repeats Denials

On the Seventh st. wharves yesterday, Dodson repeated his denials of Thursday. He claimed he had never contacted any Maryland authorities.

Asked if he knew that an official of his line had blamed him, Dodson said: "What of it, you've got to prove it."

When asked if he had ever tried to join the Southwest Harbor Lions Club, he said: "I wouldn't join that outfit if they paid me."

Dodson said he had refused to attend the session with Bowie "for the same reason that I would refuse to jump into the water if someone asked me to."

Five county police officials boarded the ship in plain clothes Wednesday night. One of them, Detective Pearson, bet and won some money on the "gambling wheel" which the club uses to raise money for charities it supports.

Wheels Closed Down

Immediately, the wheels were closed down and the ship was ordered to Fort Washington, where five county squad cars were waiting to unload the "professional gamblers" described by Dodson. The ship was allowed to proceed, however, when the passengers were identified as members of the Washington Southwest Harbor Lions Club.

Four members of the Lions Club were arrested Thursday and charged with setting up a gaming table. They were released on $100 bond for a hearing in Hyattsville Police Court June 7.

Raid Called "Unfortunate"

Bowie said the raid had stemmed from protests filed by Hall and Dodson. Thursday, the two captains denied vigorously that they had ever protested, and the mystery remained unsolved until yesterday's conference.

Magee described the incident as "most embarrassing to the company."

Bowie described the raid as "unfortunate," but he said he had no alternative but to press charges against the four Lions Club members who were operating the wheel.

Arlingtonian, 22, Is Found Hanged In Basement

James Eubank, 22, of 2100 N. Stafford st., Arlington, Va., was found hanged in the basement there at 7:20 p. m. yesterday

Police said Eubank's body was suspended by a sash cord from a steam pipe. He was pronounced dead by Dr. W. C. Welburn, county coroner.

The body was released to the Ives Funeral Home, 2847 Wilson blvd., Arlington. The funeral home said Eubank's mother, who lives in Annapolis, had been notified of his death.

The Washington Post

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

"I remember that. It seems like only yesterday"—was the reaction at the news photography show that opened yesterday at the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Titled "The Exact Instant: Events and Faces in 100 Years of News Photography," the show includes approximately 360 pictures.

Babe Ruth Picture

It was only yesterday, 1948, when Mrs. Kasenkina leaped from the window of the Soviet consulate in New York City, and was photographed, a crumpled heap, on the pavement; and it was only yesterday that cameramen recorded the late Babe Ruth at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Yankee Stadium.

Maybe it was still only yesterday, but it was 1946 when those pictures of the mushroom of cloud from the underwater blast at Bikini appeared.

It doesn't seem possible, but it was 13 years ago, April 3, 1936, that Bruno Hauptman was executed for the Lindbergh baby kidnaping and the photographer caught the shocked face of his wife as she received the news. King Edward VIII abdicated that year, and people were singing Cole Porter's "I've Got You Under My Skin."

They were singing "It's So Peaceful in the Country" in 1941, when a photographer caught "Lucky Lindy" addressing an America First rally in Cleveland, and another lensman snapped President and Mrs. Roosevelt peacefully sitting on their Hyde Park porch.

Bonus Army Marchers

It was in the Thirties, too, that people looked, and looked again, at the pictures of policemen battling Bonus Army marchers in Washington (1932); Joe Louis knocking out Max Schmeling (1936); the sloping deck of the sinking Vestris and the zeppelin Hindenburg in flames (1937), and pork chops were cheaper.

A reasonably young person might remember those moments recorded by the camera. A not quite so young person might remember President and Mrs. Wilson in France, or women suffrage marchers, their long dresses and banners whipped by the wind, as they paraded in behalf of the 19th Amendment, which became law in 1920.

It would take a grandparent, though, to remember the San Francisco fire, in 1905, and not even grandma would remember the hanging of the conspirators in the assassination of President Lincoln, both recorded by the camera when they were news events.

The Corcoran's hours today are from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., and from 2 to 5 p. m. Sunday.

The show will be on exhibit until July 3.

Dog Doomed to Die In Biting of Girl, 4

A dog that police say savagely bit an Arlington girl on Monday was ordered destroyed yesterday after a hearing in Arlington County Court.

The German shepherd bit Carolyn Joyce Funston, 4, in her yard at 1811 N. Veitch st., police said. Her injuries required between 60 and 80 stitches.

The dog, according to police, is normally chained, but was believed to have been freed by a child.

Wilson L. Dodson, 1905 N. Veitch st., owner of the dog, meanwhile, faces a charge of "keeping a vicious dog." The case was continued yesterday in the County Court until Wednesday. Court officials said the dog would be kept at the Arlington pound 14 days before it is killed, to make certain no rabies develops.

White to Pink

Hormones Tint Cherry Blossoms

Synthetic plant hormones put some normally white-petaled cherry blossoms "in the pink," the National Capital Park Service has discovered.

Cherry trees along the Tidal Basin were sprayed with the synthetic hormones last spring to preserve the blossoms for the Cherry Blossom Festival. The hormones tinted some white blossoms pink.

Results, encouraging enough to cause the Park Service to decide to continue the experiment on other flowering plants next year, include the following:

Appearance of pink hues in normally white petals of Yoshito and Akebono blossoms; retention of 35 to 80 per cent of their blossoms for three days to one week longer than normal by some sprayed trees; complete lack of response by other trees; similar results in experiments on six varieties of crab apple trees.

Famed Dolls on Display

Henry VIII and his queens are included in a permanent display exhibition of portrait and costume dolls opening today at the National Museum.

The 30 specimens also include "Famous Queens in History" and "Changes in American Fashions." The dolls were made by Mrs. Dorothy Heizer of Chatham, N. J., for the late Mrs. Frank Brett Noyes, who presented them to the Smithsonian Institution.

Rent Boosts Urged

An increase of 10.01 per cent on rents of 122 apartments in the Valley Vista, 2032 Belmont rd. nw., was recommended yesterday by District Rent Examiner William F. Mansfield.

$1830 a Year Held Adequate For Pair Here

An elderly couple needs an annual income of approximately $1830 for "a modest but adequate standard of living" in Washington, a Federal Security Agency survey showed yesterday.

The figures are based on March prices and show that a couple needs more money to live in Washington than in any of the 12 other cities for which similar surveys were made. Next highest was New York's $1780, while the cheapest city was Houston, Tex., where a couple could live as well for $1440.

The budget costs were calculated to meet requests of public assistance agencies in considering adequacy of Social Security benefits.

Included in the budget, FSA said, are "those goods and services that are necessary to insure health, decent living and normal participation in community life" — including food, housing, clothing, medical care, transportation, recreation, gifts and contributions.

The comparable figure for last June was $63 less, while that for three years ago—March, 1946—was $247 less.

Welfare Grants 25 Pct. Higher Figures Reveal

Public assistance expenditures of the District Welfare Department for the first 10 months of this fiscal year are nearly 25 per cent higher than for the previous year, figures submitted to the Welfare Board showed yesterday.

Through April, the case load was 55,250 compared to 48,820 for the corresponding period in fiscal 1948 while comparable total grants were $3,019,399 and $2,443,497, despite two cuts put in effect in recent months in aid to unemployables.

Welfare Director John W. Tramburg explained the increase is due partly to the general change in the economic picture, making jobs more difficult to find for older persons, mothers with young children and the partially disabled.

The woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Soderstrom, 303 Williamsburg dr., Silver Spring, asserted in the suit that the machine, a vibrator type, came loose from its base and fell on her while she was exercising. She asserted the mishap resulted in fractured vertebrae.

The suit asks $65,000 for Mrs. Soderstrom and $15,000 for her husband, Ole Soderstrom, for expenses and loss of her "services." Named defendant was Max J. Dex, trading as District Electrical Co., 5023 Wisconsin ave. nw. Dex refused to comment pending conference with his attorney.

Mother Fights To Keep Baby From Adoption

Mrs. Katie Mangum of Berwyn, Md., took the stand in District Court yesterday in her fight to regain custody of her 10-month-old son, David Richard.

Mrs. Mangum and her husband, Raymond, are alleged to have given their written permission last January to the baby's adoption by Mr. and Mrs. Ted Hoover of 1716 Capitol st. ne.

Proceedings which would complete the adoption are still pending.

On the stand Mrs. Mangum admitted she signed a paper in the office of Arthur F. Carroll, jr., one of two attorneys for the Hoovers, but declared she didn't understand it would award permanent custody to the Hoovers. She said she thought it provided for only a temporary arrangement.

In addition, Abraham Chaifetz and Dorsey K. Offut, attorneys for the Mangums, declared the document had not been notarized.

Judge Edward A. Tamm adjourned the trial until 10 a. m. Tuesday.

Dr. J. M. Smith Dies; Jailed in State Scandal

Smith's resignation as president of the university touched off prosecution in the scandals in 1939. In subsequent developments he, former Gov. Richard Leche and a number of others were sent to prison.

Smith was convicted in State courts of obtaining nearly half a million dollars through forged bonds and using the funds in an attempt to corner the wheat market.

In Federal Court he and four others were convicted of using the mails to defraud in connection with the sale of the Bienville Hotel in New Orleans to the Louisiana State University.

He was sentenced to 30 months in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta but was paroled after serving 10 months.

Board Is Told Officer Took Whisky Bribe

A three-man police trial board yesterday was told that a policeman dropped a speeding charge against a cab driver in exchange for two fifths of whisky.

In a five-hour trial board hearing, the defendant, Police Pvt. Vincent F. Mazzello, 31, pleaded innocent to a charge of conduct unbecoming an officer.

Inspector Milton D. Smith, trial board chairman, said the board would announce its verdict after 10 a. m. today.

Mazzello, now suspended from the police traffic division, has been on the force a year and a half.

Accepted Some Gifts

During the hearing Mazzello admitted he occasionally had accepted "gifts" on his beat.

He pleaded guilty to leaving his beat without permission, and failing to constantly patrol his beat at the time of the alleged offer of whisky.

Hacker Gordon Whitacre of McLean, Va., told the board he was picked up by Mazzello on May 14 and accused of driving 45 miles an hour in a 30-mile zone.

Mazzello next took him to the Eighth Precinct Station, the cabbie testified, and there warned him he would lose his license "if I charge you with this."

After Mazzello had called traffic headquarters to check his record, Whitacre testified the policeman wrote the hacker's name and address on one piece of paper.

"Then he wrote another name and address on another piece of paper and told me: 'Between 11 a. m. and 11 p. m. tomorrow, deliver two fifths of whisky to this address,'" Whitacre said. At this time, the cabbie testified, he did not know the arresting officer's name.

Slip of Paper Produced

A slip of paper, bearing Mazzello's name and his address at 3328 Clay st. ne., was produced before the board.

Whitacre said he then left without being charged, picked up two fifths of whisky on Wisconsin ave. nw., and went home.

But next day, he said, he began "worrying" about the gift and decided to take the problem to Police Superintendent Robert Barrett. The police chief was not at home, he said, so he told his story to Barrett's wife.

On Monday, the cab driver told the board, he was summoned to Police Inspector Arthur E. Miller's office, told his story, and was advised to go through with the alleged deal.

He phoned the policeman, Whitacre said, and arranged to meet him at an auto lot at 46 Massachusetts ave. nw. that afternoon.

At the hearing Mazzello's commanding officer, Capt. Loraine T. Johnson, who said he and Traffic Lieut. William Liverman went to that address at the same time as the cabbie, said they watched Mazzello talk to him. Then, Johnson said, the hacker went to his cab, took out a package, and vanished into the station after Mazzello.

Package Confiscated

Capt. Johnson and Lieut. Liverman then walked up to Mazzello, confiscated the bag, which they said contained two bottles, previously marked by Whitaker.

On the witness stand yesterday, Pvt. Mazzello testified that when he stopped Whitacre for speeding, the cabbie pleaded with him not to charge him. Mazzello said he considered Whitacre's reputation and family status(the cabbie has two children), took him to the station house, checked his record, and decided to drop the charge.

Before Whitacre left, the hacker asked the policeman for his name and address, Mazzello said, and the officer obligingly wrote it out for him. He said such requests were "not unusual."

On Monday, Mazzello testified Whitacre called him, said he had a package to give him. They agreed to meet at the Massachusetts ave. address, where Mazzello said he was having his engine cleaned. There Whitacre walked into a room at the filling station, laid the bag with the two bottles on an oil drum, said "thanks," and left the room, according to Mazzello.

He took the fifth, Mazzello said because people often gave them to him.

District law requires policemen to get permission from the Commissioners before accepting gifts on the job. Mazzello said he had not been aware of this rule.

Yesterday, the trial board also took under advisement a charge that Pvt. Albert Munday, 32, a veteran of six years on the force, failed to appear in Municipal Court May 6 to testify in the trial of a man he arrested for drunkenness. Munday, who pleaded innocent, said his failure to appear in court was due to his "oversight."

Ripley, 'Believe It or Not' Creator, Dies of Heart Attack

New York, May 27 (U.P.).—Robert L. Ripley, 55, creator of "Believe It Or Not," died at Harkness Pavilion late today.

The famed cartoonist, who branched out into movies, radios, books and television, was admitted to the hospital at 3 p. m. yesterday and died at 5 p. m. today.

The hospital said Ripley suffered a heart attack and died a short time later. They said he was suffering from a heart ailment when he entered the hospital yesterday.

A man with insatiable curiosity, Ripley found that people the world over were just as interested as he in human pin-cushions, three-headed calves and men who could walk only backward. At the peak of his success, his cartoons were read by 60 million people daily.

Visited 200 Countries

He had visited more than 200 countries. The sun porch of his home at Mamaroneck, N. Y., was bedecked with the flags of each nation. In the room was a compass with inscriptions giving the exact mileage to the hundreds of cities he had visited.

Ripley always preferred that his subjects be called "oddities" not "freaks" and his statements were not always what they appeared to be. He once drew thousands of indignant letters when he said Charles Lindberg was the sixty-seventh man to fly the Atlantic nonstop.

Ripley was born in Santa Rosa, Calif., on Christmas Day, 1893. His first name was actually Leroy but he disliked it and insisted that he be called Robert. His first job was polishing gravestones at a stonecutter's and he excelled as an amateur baseball pitcher.

His first newspaper job was for the San Francisco Bulletin where he went to work as a sports cartoonist. He moved to the San Francisco Chronicle three years later and then came to New York where he went to work for the Globe.

He began to depict the unusual in sports, entitling the drawings "Believe It or Not," and there was such an enthusiastic response that the editors assigned him to general coverage of the unusual.

ROBERT RIPLEY
Dies of Heart Attack

He married Beatrice Roberts, a Massachusetts beauty contest winner and former "Follies" girl, in 1919. They were divorced seven years later.

He made millions with his cartoons, movies and lectures for which he received $1000 an appearance.

He opened an "odditorium" at the New York World Fair in 1940 and it attracted thousands. In his early days he traveled very little, getting tips on strange stories from the more than one million letters a year which he received.

Later he began his ceaseless world travels and he began to delight in having his picture taken with a "monkey man" or a cannibal chieftain.

French Decorations Awarded

Afghanistan Envoy Host At Gay Independence Fete

By Marie McNair

THE AFGHANISTAN AMBASSADOR, His Royal Highness Sardar Mohammed Naim, and Princess Zohra Naim, entertained yesterday at their first official party since coming to Washington last fall—a fete to celebrate their country's independence day.

And over at the French Embassy, the Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, decorated a group of Americans, and flew the Confederate flag with fleur-de-lis from the flagpole over the doorway. But that's another story.

The garden of the Afghanistan Embassy is blooming with roses, and on the authority of General and Mrs. Gordon Young, who take their flowers seriously, the rare hybrids of last year have been replaced with the more sturdy plants—the radiance.

Inside the embassy, the Ambassador and Princess Zohra welcomed their guests. Princess Zohra wore a short black frock with three-quarter sleeves and deep yoke of filmy white chiffon dotted in black. Members of the embassy staff and their wives also formed a receiving line in an adjoining room with the last member of the staff standing at the entrance to the terrace.

Lavish Buffet

On the terrace, shaded with awnings, there was a bar and a buffet, and another buffet table in the dining room.

There was "dogh" in a huge punch bowl—the Afghanistan national drink of sour cream, shredded cucumbers, dried mint and seasonings—and on the buffet platters of rice along with cold roast beef, turkey, salads, ice cream and cake.

Anis Azer, Egyptian Minister, explained to me how the rice is made. When it's possible it is mixed with meloukhia, a green vegetable grown only 1 New York for Eastern residents. When meloukhia can't be obtained, spinach is a substitute as it was yesterday.

Some of the guests who came in later had been first to Miss Carolyn Nash's cocktail party. Some who were early had come on from the Congressional Club where David Lilienthal had spoken. I met Mrs. Charles Brennan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, with orchids on her shoulder, on her way home, and prepared to listen to her husband on "Meet the Press."

Also there were Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen, with Mrs. Allen; the Finnish Minister and Mme. Jutila; the New Zealand Ambassador, Sir Carl Berendsen, and Lady Berendsen wearing a halo of blue blossoms for a hat.

The Canadian Ambassador, Hume Wrong, and Mrs. Wrong, and the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggman made a foursome on the terrace. Mme. Pandit, the Indian Ambassador and her daughter, Rita, stood out in the high-hedged garden.

Mrs. James Webb, wife of the Acting Secretary of State, wore a dark blue sheer crepe costume with an almond green hat draped with a veil. With her was Mrs. Francis Russell. Mr. Russell is director of Public Affairs of the State Department.

Mme. El-Khouri, wife of the Syrian Minister, told me her daughter, Fazia, will graduate from the National Cathedral School in June and that she's planning a party for her.

Others there were the attache of the Turkish Embassy and Mme. Baba; Constantine de Stackelberg, enjoying a plate of Oriental rice in spite of his wife's warnings that he was expected home for dinner; the Ceylonese Ambassador and Mme. Corea in a bright sari banded in gold; the Danish Ambassador, Hendrik de Kauffmann, without Mme. de Kauffmann; and the Luxembourg Minister, Hughes LeGallais, without Mme. LeGallais.

Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould found it very cool for May without her wrap which she had left indoors; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall had come from their house just around the corner, and Mrs. Wilbur Carr came from her home on Wyoming ave., only a stone's throw away.

Then there were Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kauffman, Mrs. Robert Love Taylor, back for a visit from Tennessee; Mr. and Mrs. Marcel Ancher, Mrs. W. D. Whittemore, and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris. Mrs. Morris telling me that President Dutra, had sent to her a huge diamond and a house full of flowers when he left after his recent visit here.

Ray Muir, Assistant Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Muir, were there and there were Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mr. and Mrs. James Souby, Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor, Mrs. Emil Hurja arriving late in a dinner dress; Mrs. Tillman Stirling and Mrs. James L. Houghteling.

American Decorated

At 5 o'clock at the French Embassy, Ambassador Henri Bonnet opened the ceremony to award eight Americans the French Legion of Honor. He thanked the group for their help to France during and after the war.

Henry Carrington Lancaster, professor of French literature at Johns Hopkins University, and Glenn Martin of the Glenn Martin Aircraft Co. became officers of the Legion of Honor.

Those who became chevaliers were Mrs. William V. Olmsted, jr., director of American Aid to France in New York; Mrs. Raymond Tartiere, chairman of the Child Adoption Package Program in Washington and Northern Virginia of American Aid to France; Col. Edward C. Kavanagh, director of the Veterans Branch of Surplus Properties Administration; Melvin D. Hildreth, president of the Washington Chapter of France Forever, and chairman of the Truman Inaugural Committee; John Wilkinson Taylor, president of the University of Louisville in Kentucky, and John W. Pehle, legal adviser to the French Embassy on matters pertaining to the International Bank, and former director of the War Refugee Board.

Before the traditional kiss on each cheek the gold medal with its scarlet ribbon had been fastened to eight lapels as all hands applauded.

All members of the embassy staff were present as well as a small number of friends of the honor guests. Champagne went the rounds and cameras recorded the scene.

The South's gesture of friendship came from the University of Louisville's president, who had brought with him a flag. Of deep blue with a circle of 13 stars, the emblem also bore a gold fleur-de-lis, the bearing of the former royal family of France.

Mr. Taylor, to explain his gift, told the Ambassador that in Kentucky there is a Bourbon County, a city named Paris and another called Versailles. The flag was recently adopted by the City of Louisville which is named for the French Kings.

Hessler Studios

CELEBRATING Independence Day at the Afghanistan Embassy yesterday were the trio in the right foreground: Mrs. Francis Russell (left) wife of the Director of Public Affairs of the Department of State; Mrs. James E. Webb, wife of the Acting Secretary of State, and George V. Allen, Assistant Secretary of State. Hosts were the Afghanistan Ambassador, His Royal Highness Sardar Mohammad Naim, and Princess Zohra Naim, who entertained at their first large official fete since coming to Washington in November

With the State Societies

California Opens the Golden Gate

By Nicha Soure

"There's gold in them thar hills!" With that promising cry the '49ers rushed to the sunny land of California from every State of the Union as well as from a great many countries of the world.

There will be a different kind of rush tonight in Washington. Descendants of the '49ers and Californians will meet at the California State Society dance to celebrate the 100-year anniversary of that famous migration in United States history.

The centennial of the discovery of gold in 1849 will be celebrated tonight as part of the great series of festivities which are being held in California and in practically every community in the Nation. The gala fete will be held at 10 p. m. in the Washington Hotel.

The president of the California State Society, Representative Leroy Johnson, who comes from the historic Sacramento district where the original gold discovery was made, requests all persons in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland who are descendants of any authentic '49er to call him at National 3120.

The society hopes to discover most of the persons living in the vicinity who have any identification with the '49er era, and give them particular distinction.

Mrs. E. A. Evans is chairman of the dance committee and Representative Johnson will be master of ceremonies.

On the committee in charge of the festivities are Vice Admiral M. S. Tisdale, Arnold Kruckman, Mrs. George F. Meredith, Col. John R. Oliver, Mrs. Barbara Champion, Mrs. Donald L. Jackson, C. J. P. Williamson, Mrs. Helen Knowland, Jack Bryson and Miss Verna Badger.

Just Wait Until You See The Carolina Carousel

Have you ever tried a "Carolina Carousel?"

If you haven't, plan to attend the North Carolina State Society final dance of the season today from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. in the large ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

The "Carolina Carousel" which originated with the "young folks," is a folk dance done with ribbons. Sixteen couples make up a wheel held together by colored ribbons. The couples promenade, switch partners and dance.

"You really can't explain it," Mrs. John K. Slear, wife of the president of the North Carolina State Society said. "You just have to see it for yourself."

Although the dance today will be the last of the season, the Tar Heels' festivities will not stop. There will be other social events during the summer when the younger North Carolina crowd returns to Washington from schools and colleges.

Tennesseans Plan Quiz To End 'Em All Tonight

And on tonight's State society schedule is Tennessee's "Quiz Party to End All Quiz Parties."

If you know your Tennessee history and personalities, drop in at the Hotel 2400 at 8:30 p. m. Your reward may be anything from a Tennessee ham to a weekend New York trip with expenses free.

Mrs. Edward J. McCormack, the retiring president of the society, and Representative Clifford Davis will alternate as chief interrogators. Mrs. Mary E. Buford will serve as chairman of judges.

Following the quiz program, an election of officers for the coming year will be held. Hurd Hudson is chairman of the nominating committee which includes Col. Perry B. House and Capt. Winston Folk.

State Society Heads Elect Carl M. Walker

Carl M. Walker of South Dakota was reelected chairman of the Conference of State Society Officers at a dinner meeting of the conference on Monday.

Other officers elected are Roy Haines, Maine, first vice chairman; Clarence McCune, Missouri, second vice chairman; Miss Albertina Amizich, Delaware, secretary; and Mrs. Susan Burress, Mississippi, treasurer.

South Dakotans to Hear Fred Myers Zimmers

Fred Myers Zimmers, Washington division manager of the World Book Encyclopedia, will be the guest speaker at the annual spring luncheon of the South Dakota State Society. The meeting will be held at the Wardman Park Hotel, 12:30 p. m. on Sunday, June 5.

Honor guests at the society event will be Senator and Mrs. Chan Gurney, Senator and Mrs. Karl Mundt, Representative and Mrs. Francis Case, Representative and Mrs. Harold O. Lovre, and former Senator and Mrs. William J. Bulow are now residing in Washington.

For reservations to the luncheon, contact Miss Carlotta Reedy, at the Chalfonte Apartments.

You Can See Connecticut From Here on Good Days

There is no need to go to Connecticut to see Gov. Chester Bowles or mayors of Connecticut cities and towns.

On Thursday, June 2, the Connecticut State Society has invited all the home State political dignitaries to attend the society's dance in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. John Davis Lodge, general chairman of the event, and her committees have been busy making arrangements for the dance which will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. Music will be furnished by Jack Morton's orchestra. Towards the end of the evening, the square dancers will have the floor for some real hoedown numbers.

Hope of Man Lies in Atom Study, Lilienthal Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

AMERICA'S real security lies in getting new ideas in atomic research and development, David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, told some 200 wives of the Nation's lawmakers in an address yesterday before members of the Congressional Club.

"We need new knowledge urgently, very fast indeed," he declared, "we need it in research and the vast field of education."

He termed the release of energy for power as the most significant phase of future atomic energy development.

Lilienthal pointed out that atomic energy represents a new type of energy which can generate enough power to mean the difference between men working as beasts of burden or with individual dignity.

For example, he said that in such countries as China and India, where power was undeveloped, human beings worked as beasts of burden; but in the United States such hard labor is saved by pushing buttons and pulling levers, both of which are made possible by power.

Referring almost exclusively to the "Sunny Side of the Atom," the speaker cited the use of radioactive materials in treating cancer, heart disease and other illnesses.

According to Lilienthal, ordinary iodine passed through a radio reactor is made radio active and now is being used to treat cancer of the thyroid gland.

"Use of radiation as means of improving strains in seeds and some forms of animal life may have a profound effect on future plant and animal life," he explained, adding, "It is perfectly clear that radiation affects heredity."

After listing the now known uses of atomic energy, the Atomic Energy Commission chairman observed, "It is an amazing hoax, self-perpetrated I fear, that everything connected with atomic energy is secret."

To the three R's—readin', 'ritin' and 'rithmetic will be added the fourth—radiation—he predicted.

Lilienthal, who is now being questioned by the Joint Congressional Energy Committee on the United States Atomic Energy Commission's work, referred only indirectly to the Hill hearings.

"To say that I am happier to be here than before your husbands this afternoon is an understatement," he quipped.

Continued Lilienthal, "Atomic energy can be made safe for mankind but how safe it can be made for public officials, I don't know.

"The one thing not safe about atomic energy is that once a person becomes connected with it in any way, he seems to get stuffy, serious and an expert."

Mrs. Hal Holmes, second vice president of the club, presided, and Mrs. Harold Burton, member of the program committee, introduced the speaker.

Guatemala in Pictures

The Ambassador of Guatemala, Don Ismael Gonzalez-Arevalo, has issued invitations to the opening of an exhibit of 50 photographic studies of Guatemala by Hans Namuth, and the conferri g of the prize-winning awards in the Guatemalan essay contest at the Pan American Union at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday.

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

Fiesta Monday Will Benefit Church Fund

"Peanuts, chewing gum, popcorn and candy," will resound when the hucksters hawk their wares at the gay festival Monday in Olney, Md., sponsored by all the departments of St. John's Episcopal Church.

There'll be a magician, square dancing, fortune telling booths, movies, book stalls, a white elephant booth, a soft ball game, television programs and home-cooked lunches and dinners.

Proceeds from the fiesta, which will get under way following a memorial service at 11:30 a. m. Monday, will go to the community hall building fund. The hall, which is sponsored by St. John's Church has been used since last January as a kindergarten and nursery school and for boxing lessons, Scout meetings and church activities.

Mrs. Charles Oland and Mrs. Frank Blood are general chairmen of the festival.

'Don't Ditto–Think,' She Urges

Mme. Pandit Asks Greater Role for Women

By Sonia Stein

STATING that women have a part to play in the world which they are not playing, Ambassador Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit of India yesterday urged women to "stop dittoing what our radio commentators and favorite newspapers say . . . and do some thinking on our own."

In a talk before the Women's Press Club at a luncheon meeting at the Carlton Hotel yesterday, Mme. Pandit said that "relatively speaking, Indian women have gone further ahead in a shorter time" than women in other progressive countries, but she included the Indian women in her statement that women are not playing as large a part in promoting peace as they should.

Progress in India

Explaining that Indian women have always engaged in the teaching and nursing professions and in medicine, Ambassador Pandit said that there are now a great many women in local and provincial governments, and in the central government of India. This she attributed to the fact that they worked with the men to gain freedom for India and were automatically given responsible positions and recognition when independence was achieved.

"There was no question of a suffragette movement," she said. As far back as 1931 women were given equal rights in the freedom movement's bill of rights which is now incorporated in the new constitution. "When the constitution is ratified this year, women will have equality legally, but they already have it," she continued.

Saying with a smile that if she had had a choice of profession she doubted if she would have chosen politics, Mme. Pandit explained that Indian women were "pitched into politics" by a chain of circumstances.

The Women Joined

Mahatma Gandhi, the late leader of the Indian freedom movement, insisted that it would not succeed without women in it. To get women to break down old barriers Gandhi "appealed to the women on an irresistable plane," said Mme. Pandit, asking them if they wished to be an impediment in a struggle in which their husbands, sons, fathers and brothers were engaged.

Another factor in the interest of Indian women in politics has been the educational system, the Ambasasdor explained. Although "education in India has been almost conspicious by its absence," Indian women have an "inherited culture and tradition which helps them shoulder the responsibilty" of political activity, even when they have no formal training to equip them for other professions," she stated.

The women are active in medicine, law, teaching, screen and stage work, and in journalism which "has a great appeal for the modern Indian girl." The handsome lady Ambassador remarked with a smile that she didn't know whether it was anything to be proud of but that the Indian film industry is second only to Hollywood in production of films.

There are women on practically all of the international delegations sent out of India, Mme. Pandit said. The late Mme. Sarojini Naidu was the first governor of an Indian province of 42 million people and the Minister of Health is Mme. Rajkumari Amrit Kaur, the Indian Ambassador pointed out. Both Hindu and Moslem women are in Parliament.

The people of India were taught by Gandhi to think in terms of the larger group—the human group—Mme. Pandit said, and stressed the idea that "women's groups in India function as units for progress of the whole."

Asked to suggest reading which might acquaint Americans with India, Mme. Pandit suggested the books of her brother, Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, "Our India," by Minoo Masani, Ambassador to Brazil; "Survey of India," by Sardar Pannikar, Ambassador to China, and "What Can India Teach Us?" a collection of lectures given at Oxford by Max Muller.

How to Regild Ash Trays

I have two china ash trays which are painted with 22 karat gold. From constant washing the gold is beginning to wear through and now the white undersurface is showing. Where may I take them or how can these two ash trays be regilded?
E. F.

To apply gold to the china the pieces must be fired in the process. There is no firm in Washington doing this work, but a china firm on Connecticut ave. will send the pieces for you to an out-of-town firm which will do it. To discuss it further, I suggest you call the china firm at National 5478.

Would it be possible to mend at home a brass or copper candle holder which has broken apart at the points where it was soldered?
APPRECIATIVE READER.

It is possible to mend the candle holder at home if you have the right equipment and experience to do this sort of job. However, since the average home lacks such equipment it is usually wise to turn jobs of this sort over to a professional. For a firm to do the job, look under "Platers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book for a firm doing metal repair work as well as plating.

When raisins have become dry how does one freshen them?
A READER.

Wash the raisins, place them in a bowl and just cover with boiling water. Or, after they are washed, place them in a covered baking dish and set it in a 325 degree F. oven for 10 minutes. There will be enough water clinging to them from the washing so they will steam and become soft and plump.

What method can I use to remove white enamel from a pink dress which has been laundered?
A READER.

Rub colorless vaseline or lard into the stain, rubbing between the hands to soften the stain and cause the fat to penetrate. Let stand 30 minutes, rubbing occasionally and sponge spot with carbon tetrachloride. Repeat entire treatment if paint is not all removed the first time.

I have a set of waterless cookware and find it very difficult to keep the outside of the pans (especially the frying pans) bright as the outer surface is a rough finish. The wire brush which came with the set for cleaning it is not so effective and makes a long tedious job of cleaning. If you know of any easier way of cleaning this type of cookware, I should appreciate hearing about it.
D. H. B.

The best way to shine this type of cooking utensil is to scour it with fine steel wool soap pads. This will readily remove any dark deposit. To make the job easier, it is wise to have one of the soap pads handy so that each time the pans are washed you can go over the outside with the steel wool. Washing them in this way will remove any grease present so that it will not burn and darken the next time the pan is used.

To the reader of your column who asked for a recipe for Crumb Crust Apple Pie, here is one that is good:

Crumb Crust Apple Pie
6 cups sliced tart apples
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons flour

Mix together and put in pastry-lined pie pan. Sprinkle the following mixture over the top of the apples to make the crumb crust:

½ cup butter
1 cup flour

Cream butter and sugar. Add flour to make a crumb mixture. Sprinkle this mixture over the apples. Bake at 375 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes.

In your column the other day, I noticed a question as to washing plastic tablecloths. I haven't tried your method, which may be more effective and safer, but have had pretty good success washing plastic shower curtain, tablecloths, and pieces of plastic in the washing machine. When I have about finished machining a tub of clothes in hot, soapy water, I put in the pieces of plastic and let it "machine" about 3 minutes, then take it out and rinse in hot water, then hang to dry. If put through the wringer, air bubbles will break holes in the plastic.

This winter we purchased our first wool rugs. We have two which are twist construction, one with a cotton and jute backing, the other with all jute warp and fillers. Another rug is the handwoven variety which is made in the islands on an all-cotton backing with wool loops and uncut pile. The cotton backing is covered with rubber. We will appreciate your advice on how we should care for these rugs all year round so that there will be a minimum of danger from moths. How does one care for sponge rubber rug pads? Do you advise storing wool rugs or can we do so successfully at home these summer months? It seems to be an accepted practice here to put wool household furnishings away during the hot weather, but I am wondering if this is a necessary precaution?
A READER.

As you no doubt know, moths do not attack jute, cotton or rubber so keeping your rugs free from moths is simpler than if they were wool backed. For rugs in constant use, going over every bit of the rug surface thoroughly once a week with a vacuum will keep them free from moth eggs and larvae. Be sure to give special attention to the areas under chairs and large furniture because moth larvae do their most destruction in dark, little frequented places. Spraying the rug two or three times a year with a good moth preventive in these dark areas will give added protection. If your rug pad is wool, this should be vacuumed and sprayed three or four times a year also.

Sponge rubber pads require no special care except that it is a good idea to vacuum them once or twice a year to remove any dust in them.

The custom here of removing wool rugs and heavy hangings and slip covered wool upholstered furniture during summer months is practiced to give homes a light, airy, cool appearance rather than as a precaution against moths. As a matter of fact, unless properly prepared for storage or stored professionally, a stored rug is a better target for moths than one in use. A wool rug can be successfully stored at home by first being cleaned and then rolled in heavy paper wrappings made especially for storing rugs and available where moth bags, etc., are sold. Before rolling, the rugs should be completely sprayed with a good moth preventive or handfuls of a crystal preventive spread over the surface of the rug. When rolled and sealed in heavy paper roll, place in a dry storage. Because of the possibility of mildew, the basement is not a good storage place for rugs during the summer months.

Normalize With Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain

EXERCISE can be hard work and boring . . . or it can be fun and freeing. It's all in the way you look at it. You can think of it as building bulging biceps or as helping you to come alive.

There is magic in exercise. In fact, with calories adjusted to a reducing or gaining level, according to needs, the same set of exercises will help the thin girl to add curves, the overweight to trim down, and the normal weight to have a lovelier figure. Exercise normalizes.

Try this trio . . .

Position: Lying on back on floor, arms out on floor shoulder level, elbows bent, hands back, to keep the shoulders in line. Bend left knee and keep sole of foot flat on floor.

Movement: Raise the right leg slowly up to right angles with the body and lower slowly to the floor. Throughout the raising and lowering of the leg, keep the abdominal muscles contracted with the small of the back pulled into the floor. This centers the movement in the middle muscles. Continue 3 counts with right leg, then perform with left leg, making 6 counts in all. Keeping one knee flexed prevents strain.

To tone girdle muscles and hip muscles . . .

Movement: Raise right leg slightly and swing as far to the left as possible without moving left leg. Return to starting position and perform with left leg. Keep it up for a dozen or so counts, with the muscles of the hips and abdomen are firmly contracted.

Movement: Bend to the right side and touch fingers of right hand to floor. Back to center and bend to the left. Hold the up-pull through the middle. Twelve times to each side will do.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

If there are old roller skates around the house, you have the major part of the equipment for making a scooter that will delight the heart of your young 'un.

Both boys and girls enjoy these homemade scooters. One skate furnishes the wheels. Separate the skate and fasten one set of wheels securely to either end of a board about 2 inches by 4 inches and from 4 to 5 feet long. Heavy nails bent over will do the job, but nuts and bolts are better. Nail or screw an apple box upright to the front part of your "floorboard" and fasten a handle across the middle of the box so that each end protrudes 4 or 5 inches.

This is your scooter unadorned. If you wish, boards can be nailed across the the bottom of the open side so that groceries or some of the youngster's prized possessions can be carried. Candle-powered lamps from tin cans also may be manufactured, bells attached and other paraphernalia added.

Two or three times a year we visit friends who have an old colonial farmhouse at Prince, N. J. In helping get ready for a Thanksgiving dinner several years ago, the children in the family made place cards for all the guests they expected. Each was distinctive even though crudely drawn. Mine, for instance, was a gawky Ichabod Crane-like figure to make it clear that I was the tallest in the company. The place cards were a great success. Now when we go back, as likely as not, the same ones are brought out and used again. It brings a nice sort of feeling, too, to know that you're on file.

Perhaps this is a little tradition you would start in your family. For friends who come frequently, a special place card can be made.

New Move Argued In Gaming Cases

Ten Days

Driver Jailed In 85 MPH Police Chase

For leading police a 10-mile, 85-mile-an-hour chase in a borrowed car early yesterday, a 22-year-old soda jerk was jailed for 10 days. Fines of $135 were suspended.

The driver, John R. McFarland, of 1716 Euclid st., n.w., was arrested shortly after 3 a. m. after police forced the car to the curb at N. Capitol and Gallatin sts.

Later, in Municipal Court Judge Aubrey B. Fennell gave McFarland the jail term for speeding, but suspended the fines for 13 other traffic violations.

Police said McFarland borrowed the car from Fred Yates, 26, of 1836 Connecticut ave. nw., who forfeited $20 collateral on a charge of permitting an unlicensed operator to drive his car.

A second chase took place at about 2 a. m. and involved a car stolen earlier from Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth (R., Mass.), who lives at 3257 N st. nw.

Seventh Precinct police received a report from a resident that a car had sped past him on MacArthur blvd. nw., the driver shouting to him to "get the h— off the road."

About 30 minutes later, the same car sped past a scout car containing Pvts. R. C. Orme and K. D. McPherson. They gave chase but the car got away. Finally they found it abandoned at Sherrier pl. and Weaver pl. nw.

They made a search of the vicinity and picked up John W. Harrison, 20, of 5238 Sherrier pl. nw. Later, police said, Harrison admitted that he and another youth had stolen the car from the 3200 block of N st. nw.

The second suspect, Charles L. Richardson, 18, of 4944 Hurst st. nw., was arrested at about 1 p. m. Both are charged with unauthorized use of an automobile and will be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Post Reporter

Validity of four warrants which netted 15 indicted gamblers more than two months ago was argued again yesterday in two spirited sessions in District Court.

Judge Edward M. Curran heard the Government and four defense attorneys debate the merits of search and arrest warrants used in the March 25th raid on the Bladensburg (Md.) headquarters of William "Snags" Lewis, and 13 others accused of gambling and conspiracy.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut presided over a similar discussion in the Government's case against Frederick C. Whiteoak, 1504 Oates st. ne., a Times-Herald circulation man, accused of setting up a gaming table for betting on horse races.

Both judges took defense motions to suppress evidence and quash indictments against their clients under advisement, and continued the cases until Tuesday morning. Debates consumed about three hours.

In both cases motions had previously been argued.

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz reopened the Lewis case to introduce a new current warrant, which he said a U. S. marshal had been with him at the time of the Bladensburg raid. The warrant was for the arrest of a man identified only as "Frankie," who was reported to be at that address.

Hitz tried to introduce the warrant in an effort to support the seizure of property at Lewis' headquarters, in case Judge Curran should rule that the search warrant was invalid. Hitz maintained that seizure was lawful incidental to a legal arrest, even if a search warrant should be declared illegal. Furthermore, Hitz said, once inside the house, Government agents witnessed a violation of the District gambling laws and because of that violation made lawful arrests and seizures.

Defense Objection

Defense Attorneys William Collins, Myron Ehrlich, Charles E. Ford and Bernard Margolius objected to introduction of the new warrant as evidence. They said it should have been introduced earlier, if at all. Judge Curran withheld his decision until the defense on Tuesday cross-examines Deputy Marshal Francis McCathran, who testified he had the warrant.

In the Whiteoak case, Hitz also tried to introduce the arrest warrant for the same purpose. Dale E. Adams, a consultant to United States Attorney George Morris Fay, testified he gave such a warrant to a marshal, who in turn served it on Whiteoak.

Ford objected to the introduction of this warrant, and Judge Schweinhaut withheld his decision until Tuesday.

Bowling Manager Sought in Loss Of League Funds

The manager of Bethesda Bowling Center, 7651 Old Georgetown rd., was sought on a warrant yesterday in connection with the loss of a total of $1694 in money belonging to a bowling league at the center.

Montgomery County police said the manager, Frederick Murphy, 48, of 2400 13th st. nw., had disappeared after leaving a note for his wife.

Det. Sergt. William Whalen said the money was the property of a bowling league of which Murphy had been elected treasurer.

LOW-BROW LOU—Lou Costello's running through his tricks these days on the Capitol screen in "Africa Screams"

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—W. Averell Harriman was at a conference with Stalin soon after the announcement of the first atom bomb . . . "This is most interesting," Stalin told him. "For without this weapon, it will be impossible to make war."

Joe DiMaggio arrived at Toots Shor's yesterday wearing the new rubber-soled shoes prescribed for him. They were made and fitted for him by a shoemaker on W. 10th st. They're broad and shapeless and their color is dirty brown . . . When DiMaggio tried them on the first time, he told the shoemaker: "Can't you make them look better? Remember, I've been on the 10 best-dressed-men list."

DiMaggio drove to Yankee Stadium yesterday in Phil Silvers' car. "It's faster, by subway," he was reminded . . . "I know. I used to go to the stadium every day by subway," he sighed . . . "Until when?" he was asked . . . "Until one season," he explained, "I got too many hits."

When James V. Forrestal resigned, Leon Henderson came to lunch with him. The former OPA boss is one of the few men in America who had a similar experience—a rise to power in Government, long years of faithful service, then resignation and psychosomatic disturbances . . . "You should get out of Washington immediately and take a long rest and have some fun," Henderson advised him. "In handling these jobs, we draw on our reservoirs—and after we leave, it never comes easy again." Henderson told him of his eye affliction when he left OPA. He left Washington immediately, flew to Cuba and Mexico and relaxed. Many weeks later he was in a tiny village on the west coast of Mexico, fronting the sea. "I saw a ship far away, and saw it clearly," said Henderson. He knew his eyes were better, and a few hours later he was in a plane back to Washington, to his work, his home and family again.

One on the Aisle—

Lovely Low-Brow Stuff at Capitol

By Richard L. Coe

I HAVEN'T BEEN my extroverted self since Harper's started this "Highbrow, Lowbrow, Middlebrow" business. Russell Lynes' theory that we're all in one of these categories has turned me into an introverted class-hopper.

The worst thing that can happen to you in former choirboy Lynes' subdivisions is to fall into either the Upper Middlebrow or the Lower Middlebrow, and most of the time there am I.

I belong to a book club, I'm nuts about musical comedy, I like regimental neckties (never having had a regiment) and I relish Roquefort cheese in my salad. Definitely Middlebrow.

Every once in a while, of course, I seem to be in Russell's Highbrow set when I conscientiously wipe but do not wash our salad bowl, applaud Miss Lucia Chase's wonderful Ballet Theater or covet a chair that looks like a mushroom. Male Highbrows don't wear hats either, which makes me think of the day our publisher saw Paul Hume and me plowing through the rain hatless. "Too poor to buy a hat?" he shouted, the Middlebrow.

Then I go to an Abbott-Costello movie and laugh like a drain, which seems to make me a Lowbrow. Yesterday I saw the boys in "Africa Screams" at the Capitol. This gets a bit drawn out at times, but I laughed happily at it and at two of the Capitol's vaudeville acts, so that puts me into the Lowbrow area.

According to Lynes, the Highbrows envy the lowbrows because they're so free and uninhibited. Us Lowbrows, we're uncritical, see, and we just like belly laughs and beer and our old Army clothes.

"AFRICA SCREAMS" United Artists release produced by Huntington Hartford. Screen play by Earl Baldwin. Photographed by Charles Van Enger. Directed by Charles Barton. At the Capitol.

THE CAST

Buzz Johnson.....Bud Abbott
Stanley Livingston.....Lou Costello
Diana Emerson.....Hillary Brooke
Boots.....Max Baer
Grappler.....Buddy Baer
Clyde Beatty.....Clyde Beatty
Frank Buck.....Frank Buck
Gunner.....Shemp Howard
Harry.....Joe Besser

Mostly Lou

So when Lou Costello, the fat one, and Bud Abbott, the skinny one, take off for Africa with Clyde Beatty, Frank Buck and the Baer Brothers, we just settle back and wait for the laughs. It's mostly Lou's picture, playing with lions and crocodiles and giving his varied double-takes. It's not funny all the time, even to us Lowbrows, but still there are laughs in it and we simple folks don't ask for much more. Shemp Howard and Joe Besser, whom you've been seeing for years in vaudeville, burlesque and the Olsen-Johnson musicals, are in it, too. Shemp behind thick glasses and Joe stuck with a water tap on his finger.

I don't think one and you Middlebrows will go for this one and you Highbrows would only envy us Lowbrows laughing at this nonsense. I'm not apologizing and I'm not saying that "Africa Screams" is a good comedy. I'm only saying that Abbott and Costello, whom I wouldn't dream of listening to on the raido (as a Highbrow I never turn the thing on) make me laugh in my capacity as a Lowbrow. Confused?

THE CAPITOL'S stage show has an artful monologuist. Lee Davis, who pulls some painful ones but gets boffo laughs with 'em ("My wife is an Angel." "Mine Is Still Living"). He's got a pretty shattering impression of politicians and his style has that assurance without brashness that audiences like. I also enjoyed the Tattlers, two gals, two guys, whose material is crisply amusing. Rudy Cardenas, a Mexican juggler, opens the show and the Richard-Adair dancers close.

ART GODFREY'S from-the-heart remarks to his network audience on the DAR refusal to let all the members of his company appear on the stage of Constitution Hall caused a sensation with his listeners, and a good thing, too . . . Art's outspoken disgust with this form of hypocrisy in the heart of our Nation and by people who should lead the country brought cheers from his studio audience . . . There's a man who's obviously no Commie, but the best citizen any country could have . . . That on-the-nail crack from such as Art ought to dispel once and for all the notion that those of us who want all of us to enjoy the best in our country are Reds and trouble-makers . . . Congratulations, Art, it was magnificent.

VIRGINIA BRADLEY, who sang "This Had Better Be Love" and "Who Goes Home," among other things, in Catholic University's sold-out "Thank You, Just Looking," has been signed to sing at the Wardman Park starting tonight . . . Philadelphia-born 21 years ago, Ginny was a big hit in the CU show and got rollicking encouragement from Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healey when they were playing the Statler last December . . . The Wardman's a good chance for Ginny, who's just completed her final exams . . . Good luck, kiddo.

GINNNY will not be able to sing any of the Jay Gorney songs from the CU show, though . . . "Thank You, Just Looking" has been nibbled by several Broadway producers, which ties up all the material . . . Word is expected soon from Jean and Walter Kerr as to their sketches and Gorney's songs' future.

IN BRIEF—Ben Hecht's ballet picture, "Specter of the Rose," is revived today at the Hippodrome, with Ivan Kirov, Viola Essen, Judith Anderson and Michael Chekhov in the leads . . . "Casablanca," which is doing bang-up as a reissue at the Metropolitan, rates a midnight showing tonight, unusual for the Met . . . "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" closes tonight at the Unnatural National, to be followed tomorrow by "Penny Serenade," with Irene Dunne and Cary Grant . . . Last time tonight for the Thespian Study Club's "The Two Mrs. Carrolls," at the Armstrong High auditorium at 8:40.

Coe Elected Head of D. C. Bond Club

By S. Oliver Goodman

William C. Coe, partner in Mackall & Coe, was elected president of the Bond Club of Washington at the annual field day yesterday at the Manor Club.

Coe

Coe succeeded G. Fenton Cramer of Ferris & Co.

The other new officers are Austin B. Rohrbaugh of Rohrbaugh & Co., vice president, and Edgar B. Rouse of Robert C. Jones & Co., secretary-treasurer.

Elected to the board of governors were Millard F. West of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, and Bernard J. Nees of Johnston, Lemon & Co. Nees served as this year's general outing chairman.

Coe, the new Bond Club president, entered the investment business here in 1926. He was manager of the Washington office of Brooke Stokes & Co. from 1930 to 1939. In the latter year, he joined with William W. Mackall to form the investment house of Mackall & Coe. He is a graduate of West Point, class of 1920.

More than 275 local investment dealers and their guests attended yesterday's outing. Highlights included the mock stock exchange trading for prizes, golfing contests, a horseshoe tournament, a dinner and door prizes.

NET DECREASES: Capital Transit Co. yesterday reported that net income for April amounted to $109,398 compared with $134,119 last year. Bandit Puts 5 on Ice, Steals Store's $900

A lone bandit yesterday escaped with about $900 in cash from the safe of a Safeway store at 2440 Wisconsin ave. nw., after forcing five employes into a storage icebox.

The holdup occurred about 8:15 a. m., shortly after the store manager, Willis E. Parsley, 33, of 709 Newton pl. nw., and Paul W. Buchanan, 33, of 4429 Wisconsin ave. nw., manager of the meat department, entered the store.

The bandit followed right behind them as they unlocked the front door and stepped inside. As Parsley turned to lock the door behind him, the bandit pushed against the door and drew a .32-caliber automatic out from under his trench coat, police said.

Keeps One Covered

He ordered Buchanan to get into the icebox at the rear of the store, while he kept Parsley covered with the gun beside the safe near the front door.

"What time do the rest of your employes come in?" he demanded. Parsley replied about 8:30 a. m.

"Then you have exactly seven minutes to open that safe," the gunman said.

Parsley opened the safe and then at the bandit's order joined Buchanan in the icebox. Three other employes, William Myers of 1911 Pennsylvania ave. nw.; John Kaufman of 1762 Church st. nw., and Charles F. Wolfe of 2010 4th st. ne., arrived for work, police said, as the thug was taking the money from the safe.

Come Out, Notify Police

They also were ordered back into the icebox and the gunman then left, locking the store door behind him. All five employes waited in the icebox about 10 minutes before they came out and notified police.

The gunmen answered the description of a bandit who on January 4, shortly after 8 a. m., forced the manager of a Safeway store at 3228 Wisconsin ave. nw. to open the safe and then stay in the icebox while he escaped with $1816 in cash, police said. He is about 35 to 40 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs about 165 wounds and has a ruddy complexion, according to police.

3 Industrial Home Fugitives Caught After Crime Wave

Three boys whose ages are 10 to 13 were taken in hand by police early yesterday after escaping from the Industrial Home School for Boys, 2453 Wisconsin ave. nw., and launching a whirlwind crime campaign.

According to Pvt. Paul E. Chappelle of the Eighth Precinct, the boys walked away from the school at about 1 p. m. Thursday. Their first stop, he said, was at the Sears, Roebuck store, Wisconsin ave. and Albemarle st. nw., where each stole a pair of trousers, shirt and jacket.

They threw away their blue denim uniforms and put on the new garments.

After dark, Chappelle said, the boys broke into four business places in the 4800 block of Massachusetts ave. nw., collecting about $115 and 10 cartons of cigarettes. Then they went to Union Station.

They flashed the money freely at Union Station. Suspicious terminal police questioned them, then called in Eighth Precinct police. The boys were returned to the school.

The grand jury, under the enabling court order, was exclusively investigative and could not indict. Another grand jury would have to act on any charges.

The report said the grand jury, in 121 days of meetings and 9000 pages of testimony only "scratched the surface" of Philadelphia's municipal scandals.

Forty-five minutes later, she repeated the performance at another corner. There witnesses noticed that the comely woman also wore excessive makeup.

Italian Painting's U. S. Sale Brings Arrest of Three

Rome, May 27 (NYHT).—Italian authorities disclosed today that three persons have been arrested in connection with the acquisition of Andrea del Castagna's painting, Saint Sebastian, by the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The three live in Florence. One was described as a lawyer, Luigi Albrighi, who deals in the sale of antiques and the other two were identified as minor employes of the Italian government art export control office.

A full report will be made to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in the hope that it will restore the painting to Italy voluntarily.

The investigation revealed that a ring of Italians falsified papers connected with the painting. There is no evidence the Americans who purchased the picture for resale to the Metropolitan Museum were aware of the fraud.

'Pro-Red' Outlook' Check Asked on Butterworth

By the United Press

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry yesterday asked the Senate to determine whether W. Walton Butterworth has a "pro-Communist outlook" before confirming him as Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs.

Butterworth, a career diplomat, was one of five new Assistant Secretaries nominated by President Truman Thursday. If confirmed, he will have an even more authoritative voice in United States policy on China than he now has as director of the Office of Far Eastern Affairs.

Wherry said the Senate Foreign Relations Committee should investigate Butterworth's "past record and his qualifications." He said four or five Senators intend to "get all the details" before confirming him.

During his 21-year diplomatic career, Butterworth has served in Singapore and Nanking as well as in various European posts.

'Dream' Killer, 16, Waives Hearing In Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., May 27 (AP).—Randolph Brewster, 16, of Bowman's Addition, waived a preliminary hearing early this afternoon and was ordered held without bond on a murder charge by Magistrate Frank A. Perdew.

Brewster is charged with the fatal shooting of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Katherine Pearls Brewster, 18, at her home on Wednesday.

Mrs. Brewster's husband, Thomas, 23, received a broken leg when shot by his brother and is a patient at Allegany Hospital.

Rites for 150,000 Frogs

Kumanoto, Japan, May 27 (U.P.).—A Buddhist memorial service was held yesterday in Jomyo Temple for 150,000 frogs. The frogs were killed recently and their legs were exported to the United States.

Missing Boy, 10, Is Found at Maryland Resort

Bobbie Bingham, 10-year-old school boy, missing from West Lanham since Wednesday morning, was found yesterday at a North Beach summer resort.

His mother, Mrs. Lyle Cheatham, said a man called her from North Beach and said he had Bobbie in his home.

She said she was told Bobbie was seen at North Beach Wednesday night but was thought then to be just "another one of the kids."

Her caller, unidentified, said Bobbie told him his folks went away, locked him out of their cottage and left him to take care of himself. The man took the boy home with him.

She told police Bobbie had been upset because he was taken out of his school play because of misbehavior.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Alex Prefers His Paper Dry (But Not Dull)

I did a "double take" when I read a letter from Alexander Harrison of 1736 F st. nw. He suggested:

"Why can't you folks put out a dry newspaper?"

District Liner Harrison then went on to explain that his preference for dry reading matter extended only to its physical properties. His complaint was that the ink rubbed off on his fingers.

I took the beef to J. W. Mobley, our press room foreman, and got this answer:

Newspaper ink is the "quick-drying" variety—akin to that used in "quick-drying" fountain pens. It doesn't evaporate; it soaks into the paper.

However, even several days after the paper is printed, you can run your fingers over the page and pick up a certain amount of surface smudge.

That's true of all newspapers, because they all use more or less the same type of ink.

The pressman's problem is to regulate the volume of ink so that the paper will be "black" enough to be read with ease, but not too black, because that causes smudging and results in what's known as a "dirty" paper.

HAVE YOU BOUGHT YOUR TICKETS YET?

The news that Bob Hope and Bing Crosby will be on hand for the National Celebrities Golf Tournament is certainly most welcome — because both are famed for their ad lib wit.

As a matter of fact, Hope has become a favorite pal of Veep Alben Barkley, who is himself a handy guy at telling funny stories.

The last time Bob was in town, he stopped in to visit the Vice President, who was about to leave for Winchester. "I'm going down to crown the Apple Blossom Queen," he explained. "After I crown her, I get to plant a kiss on her cheek—and I'm going to make it a good one, Bob."

"Simmer down," counseled Hope. "You're not supposed to turn this into a baked apple festival."

From Crosby comes the observation: "It's too bad Jack Benny won't be here. He'd be a fine one for this golf tournament. In all the years he's been playing, he's lost only one golf ball—and he wouldn't have lost that one if the string hadn't broken."

Hope concentrates his fire on his old sidekick, Der Bingle. He says:

"Playing 18 holes of golf with Bing isn't as tiring as it used to be before he added a sidecar to his wheelchair."

The clowning they do makes it appear that they're not interested in their golf match, but don't let them fool you. Hope would rather beat Crosby at golf than be elected President.

And, for my dough, he's got about the same chance. Wanna bet?

TAKEN FOR A RIDE BY SANTA CLAUS

Leonidas (Santa Claus) Beall of 6420 Western ave., Chevy Chase, Md., led me into a booby trap the other day with the innocent remark:

"We certainly have cheap streetcar fares here. Two people can ride from one end of town to the other for only a cent and a quarter."

"Whoa, there," said I. "For two people it would be 26 cents the way I figure."

"Yep," said Santa with a twinkle, "that's what I said: a quarter and a penny."

PERSONAL NOTES

"Two Close Readers," 1012 Barnaby ter. se.: I don't mind anybody stealing my stuff; that's a compliment of sorts. What would really cut me to the quick is if they'd consider these paragraphs unworthy of theft.

OPPORTUNITY

Hazel Kenyon Markel, WTOP program director, was badly burned Thursday morning when she lit the gas stove in her home and it blew up in her face.

Painfully injured and ordered to bed by her doctor, Hazel sneaked off to town, anyhow, because she was scheduled to address the Petworth Women's Club luncheon.

After she was finished, I said: "You ought to be spanked for not staying in bed as you were told to."

"When 500 women indicate a willingness to listen to me talk," replied Hazel, "I'm not going to let a little thing like an explosion stop me."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I didn't mean to get involved in this thing, but so long as you've asked about it, I'll quote from my dictionary:

"Sometime—at a future time.

"Sometimes—occasionally."

Thus: "Always a good show, sometimes a swell one" means that, occasionally, there is a swell show. But "Always a good show, sometime a swell one" is merely a vague promise that the swell show will be along at some unnamed future date.

Get it?

Gus Bresnahan
12 Ashby st.
Alexandria, Va.

Dear Gus:

Got it.

I'm reminded of the story of the college professor who ordered "prunes and cream" and objected when the waitress brought him a dish of prunes, swimming in cream. "This," he complained, "is prunes with cream. I asked for prunes and cream."

"Well for heaven's sake," snapped the harried waitress, "what's the difference. As far as I can see, it's the same thing."

"My dear young lady," intoned the pedant, "would you say that 'woman and child' is the same as 'woman with child'?"

Love for FBI Head News in Europe

By Drew Pearson

The State Department's "Voice of America" recently carried an unusual broadcast to Europe. It told about a police chief who was not feared and hated, but who was so loved and respected that the American people were raising money voluntarily to build a boys' school in his honor.

Hoover

That police chief is J. Edgar Hoover.

From the State Department's viewpoint this was excellent propaganda. Furthermore, it was true.

In the United States it was not especially considered news—for a very good reason. We have come to take the fair-minded head of the FBI so much for granted that we don't realize that in many parts of Europe the head of the secret police is a figure synonymous with invasion of the home, torture and beatings.

Therefore, the State Department quite rightly reported to Europe the amazing fact that the American people wanted to raise money voluntarily to build a juvenile delinquency school as a tribute.

Hoover, since then, has modestly said he does not think a memorial should be built to a living man. However, the name is not important. It's the spirit that counts. And money has been coming in to the J. Edgar Hoover Foundation, Washington, D. C., from all sorts of people. Here is a letter from a preacher in Waco, Tex., the Rev. Arthur J. A. Koerner, who writes:

"I am not a wealthy man, but I want to join in the tribute to a great, unselfish public servant, especially a tribute which will help solve one of our greatest problems—juvenile delinquency. Therefore, my wife and my son, Paul, agreed with me at the breakfast table to mail this foundation every year a check for $10, and to do this continuously after I am gone from this world."

Vishinsky Optimism

Secretary of State Acheson reported to President Truman that Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky has been even more cordial at the opening sessions of he Foreign Minister's conference than was reported in the press. Vishinsky also appeared nervous, but this was attributed not to worry over the conference, but to a slight touch of St. Vitus dance, with which the Russian chieftain has been suffering for some time, and which was the reason why he went to Czechoslovakia last winter for a cure.

At one point Vishinsky's expression of hope that much would be accomplished during the Paris discussions caused Britain's Foreign Minister Bevin to say:

"That depends in large part on you."

"It depends on all of us here," Vishinsky replied. "There are not two of us here; there are four of us here. I think we will accomplish a great deal."

During the discussions of the agenda for the Paris talks Acheson raised a question as to how much could be accomplished during the talks. To this Vishinsky made the amazing reply:

"We will reach agreement on everything we take up here."

Acheson interpreted Vishinsky's suggestion that a Japanese peace treaty be considered as an indication that Russia might want to reach a general settlement on all outstanding East-West problems now.

In his cabled report to the White House, however, Acheson cautioned: "One swallow does not a summer make."

Boykin, Alabama

Race riots make sure-fire headlines, but race harmony doesn't. That's why you won't see front-page headlines about Boykin, Ala.

Nevertheless Alabama's Congressman Frank Boykin, who votes against most progressive measures in the House, has made a big contribution toward better race relations in this little town. In fact, the Negroes were so grateful that they named the town after him.

Congressman Boykin not only secured Federal money to help the community, sent personal contributions to improve the schools, but is now offering Negro farmers a Brahma bull and a thoroughbred boar.

After the postoffice of Boykin was opened, the townsfolk sent their first letter to the Congressman for whom the town was named. They got the town's lone white man, J. R. Hall, to write it.

"This community," he wrote, "is small and entirely colored, but they have hopes of expanding by the education of the young folks and the guidance of the older people in better methods of farming.

"Being in public office, you often have a thankless job . . . (but) may this letter be just a token of appreciation and thanks for all the good things you have done for us."

Merry-Go-Round

Commenting on the congressional coalition against his program, President Truman told a recent caller: "Public welfare is still the best politics and legislators who don't know it will find out." . . . Retorting to charges by congressional foes that his legislative demands are too great, Truman added: "My policy always has been to plan big. That way, you can always cut down. But if you plan small, it's difficult to build up." . . . One Congressman accidentally omitted from this column's recent roll-call of the Dixiecrat-GOP coalition is Edward H. Jenison, Illinois Republican . . . Though the resignation of able, young Assistant Secretary of Labor John Gibson was announced two months ago, Secretary Maurice Tobin has persuaded him to remain on the job. Almost every night his wife asks if he has quit. Finally Gibson told her: "Ripley ought to hear about this. You're the first wife I've ever known who wanted her husband to quit work." . . . At Senate hearings on arthritis and rheumatism research, Ralph B. Rogers, Springfield, Mass., motorcycle maker, pointed out that seven million American workers were afflicted with these painful diseases, and that Government research could improve not only their health, but their earning power. Even a slight improvement, he said, would enable them to pay $1 more per person in Federal income taxes, and thus pay for the Federal research.

Meet Our Honorary

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

They Are the Valued and Loyal Associates Who Form

The Hecht Co. "TEN-TO-FIFTY YEAR and FIVE-TO-TEN YEAR CLUBS"

THEY'RE meeting tonight. All seven hundred fifty-one (751) of them. To welcome into membership eighteen more Hecht Co. Associates who have completed a decade of service with us and 101 who have completed 5 years' service. They're meeting tonight, formally. But all through the 53 years of The Hecht Co.'s career, this loyal and valued group has been meeting and serving you. You, our customers, know many of them personally. They tell all Hecht Co. Associates what you like, what you want so that all of us can serve you better. Naturally, we turn to our "Honorary Board of Directors" whose service through the years uniquely qualifies them to guide the rest of us toward their high standards of leadership and service.

WE'VE over thirty-five hundred persons in our store family. Enough to form a little community. We like to think of the members of our Ten-to-Fifty and Five-to-Ten Clubs as our leading citizens. They first settled, they laid the foundations, they planned the growth, and through the years their wise heads and practiced hands have given us the prestige and affection all communities strive to achieve. The spirit and devotion of this group typify the feelings of our entire store community. We like you to visit us and enjoy every minute of your stay. For, your loyal patronage and recognition of all of us are the highest rewards in retailing—the realization that we are pleasing you.

P.S. This page first appeared on May 20th, 1940, in The Washington Post. We reprint this annual meeting of our Honorary Board of Directors with proper revision in names and figures to bring it up to date.
